

ENGLISH PAPERS DISCUSS MEXICAN SITUATION IN POINTED EDITORIALS

ALL POINT OUT THAT ENGLAND'S ATTITUDE IS NOT ANTAGONIS-TIC TO UNITED STATES BUT HOLDS VEILED THREATS.

General Diaz Is Invited To City Of Mexico By Huerta But Will Probably Refuse To Accept The "Invitation."

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

London, Oct. 25.—The Mexican situation now occupies the most prominent place in the public mind and in the press of the British Isles and more particularly the divergent views of the United States and England, as to the best policy to bring about order in that country.

It is still held in official circles here that the differences between the United States and England are not such as possibly could lead to any trouble and that they will smooth themselves out when all the facts shall have been made known by Washington. The greatest regret exists here that any signs of ill-feeling should have been displayed in regard to the situation.

MAY BE MEXICO'S NEXT PRESIDENT

General Felix Diaz.

General Felix Diaz is one of the three candidates for president of Mexico. The election is to be held on October 26. The other candidates are Federico Gamboa, a member of Huerta's cabinet, and Manuel Calero, former minister from Mexico to the United States.

themselves out when all the facts shall have been made known by Washington. The greatest regret exists here that any signs of ill-feeling should have been displayed in regard to the situation.

The Government's Voice.
The West Minister Gazette, a government organ, says that while England has great interests in Mexico, she cannot take the same liabilities or responsibilities in regard to that country as the United States does, although the fact of her not doing so constitutes no sort of hostility to the United States.

The Fall Mail Gazette, an opposition newspaper, says: "Provisional President Huerta's declaration to the diplomatic corps in Mexico City, full of superficial common sense. But despite the self-denying ordinance by which he withdraws his candidature for the presidency, and despite the promise of the Mexican government not to interfere with the elections, General Huerta will remain dictator when the polls have been declared."

The newspaper points out that recognition of the existing Mexican government does not constitute support of it.

Strict Neutrality.
The Standard says: "England's only attitude in regard to Mexico is one of strict neutrality. Even the Monroe Doctrine itself cannot compel England to refrain from recognizing a man whom an independent nation has entrusted with the government."

The Globe, in an editorial article, says that Great Britain has no desire or intention of picking a quarrel with anybody over the question of Mexico. The Globe thinks that the United States should accept General Huerta's assurances that he will not become a dictator.

Powers Active.
Paris, Oct. 25.—Exchanges of views are taking place between various European powers possessing large economic interests in Mexico, with the object of defining common policies there, especially a joint attitude after the elections. It is understood that the government at Washington will decline to recognize a result which the European governments might consider provisionally desirable.

From London.
The initiative in the matter is understood to come from London. It is pointed out here that the joint economic interests of Europe in Mexico exceed those of the United States. It is felt there should be a concerted policy on the part of the United States and Europe.

Will Diaz Accept.
Veracruz, Oct. 25.—General Felix Diaz today received a "requisito" from the Mexican government to proceed at once to the federal capital. Col. Manuel Vidaurranga, secretary to the Mexican minister of war, arrived here on a special train with the invitation which was practically an order for Diaz to accompany him to Mexico City.

Gen. Diaz did not decide immediately to comply with the offer made this morning to force him to accept the invitation.

Probably Decline.
Unless General Diaz alters his intentions he will not return to the federal capital notwithstanding the "invitation" which was signed personally by Provisional President Huerta.

Whether Col. Vidaurranga bore orders to arrest Gen. Diaz was not known this morning. Diaz did not deem it a formal negative answer to Huerta's invitation.

Personal Letter.
Huerta's letter urged Diaz to come to the federal capital immediately "for his own prestige as well as for that of the government." It was written in affectionate terms and bore no resemblance to an official command.

Col. Vidaurranga's instructions apparently indicated the necessity of his returning to the federal capital today with a reply to Diaz.

Announcement.
Laredo, Tex., Oct. 25.—A Spanish paper here today published an extra declaring that constitutionalists captured Monterey last night. These dispatches are alleged to have come from Constitutional General Blanco at Matamoros, who reported he had telegraphed communication to within seven miles of Monterey.

No Official Word.
Washington, Oct. 25.—No official dispatches had reached here today from Vera Cruz regarding the summons of General Felix Diaz to Mexico City. It is the official opinion that it will be many days before the result of the Mexican elections tomorrow can be announced because of the demoralization of communication.

Claim Capture.
Brownsville, Oct. 25.—"Monterey has been captured." This was the message received today by Constitutional General Blanco at Matamoros opposite here. It came from the chief of Major Mujica, who is today at Reynosa, sixty miles from here on the railroad line at Monterey.

Plot Discovered.
Mexico City, Oct. 25.—General Don Jose Milla Servin, former chief of staff of Gen. Huerta, while the latter was minister of war, was arrested today on a charge of being concerned in a plot to create a disturbance in the federal capital on the occasion of the elections tomorrow.

Manuel Madero, a cousin of the late president, Francisco Madero, was arrested today at Saltillo, on account of his alleged connection with a recently discovered plot in that city against the federal government.

Madero's Relatives.
Daniel and Evaristo Madero, also relatives of the late president, who had been previously arrested, are reported to have reached Tampico. They will be sent to the prison at Vera Cruz, where they are to be confined in the old prison of San Juan de Ulua, pending their trial on charges of sedition.

No Previous Word.
This was the first indication that has come to the government of possible trouble. It is not expected that any outbreak will occur but the troops in the capital are to be held in readiness for instant action and other emergency measures have been taken to preserve order.

The police have been instructed not to do anything which would conflict with the right of the citizens to cast their ballots.

MRS. EATON CALLED TO TESTIFY TODAY

Case of Defense Is Brought to Climax
With Testimony of Late Rear
Admiral's Widow.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Plymouth, Mass., Oct. 25.—The appearance of the defendant on the stand today brought to a climax the trial of Jennie Mae Eaton, charged with causing the death of her husband, Rear Admiral Joseph Giles Eaton, by giving him poison.

Counsel for the defense had led up to her testimony by calling during the past two days numerous witnesses who described Rear Admiral Eaton as having been frequently under the influence of liquor or drugs. Counsel sought today to draw from her own lips Mrs. Eaton's story of her life with the admiral. It is the contention of the defense that the man died from an over-dose of a drug which he had been accustomed to take.

Calm and Self-Possessed.
At the trial of Mrs. Eaton today the defendant was calm and self-possessed as she began her testimony. The jury gave close attention to her story which she told in a low, modulated voice, addressing herself always to her senior counsel, William A. Morse. Under questioning of the attorney, Mrs. Eaton described her early life. She was born at Alexandria, Va., 39 years ago, she said, her family ever removing to Michigan and then to Washington when she met her first husband, D. H. Ainsworth.

Her life with Ainsworth was unhappy. She said that her husband lost two positions and that she was forced to aid in the support of the family, selling books from house to house. During her life with Ainsworth she and her two children, June and Dorothy, lived successively at Washington, Guthrie, Okla., St. Louis, Chicago, and then returned to Washington. She bought a home, paying $1200 down. Later she was forced to sell the home.

Mrs. Eaton said that she placed her daughters in school at Frederick, Md., and then took up nursing. In September, 1905, she went up to Admiral Eaton's Washington home to attend to the admiral's first wife. The patient died a week later but the witness remained at the home to care for the admiral, who had been drinking heavily. Later she accompanied him to Boston. At his request because of his pitiable condition.

Before meeting Admiral Eaton she had taken steps to obtain a divorce from her first husband. While attending the admiral she recovered her final divorce papers from Chicago. While in Washington she and Admiral Eaton discussed the possibility of their marriage. They were married at Boston, July 25, 1906, and began a householding on an elaborate scale at Brookline, but because of their debts and the admiral's intemperance, Mrs. Eaton said they were forced to buy a place in the country.

MICHIGAN AGGIES WORTHY OPPONENTS

Wisconsin Eleven Contends With Strong Outside Team at Camp
Randall Today.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., Oct. 25.—The team of Michigan Agricultural College, victors over the University of Michigan eleven at Camp Randall in this city today. Although battleships took their leave today of the shores of America for the Mediterranean. Grim in the dull gray paint of their sea cloaks the ponderous war machines nodded a final farewell on the swelling tide of Hampton Roads while the captain of the fleet, headed by Rear Admiral Charles J. Badger received their last word of instructions and farewell from assistant secretary of the navy Roosevelt.

The assistant secretary, representing the navy department, and the president, came down the potomac on the yacht Dolphin, which took its place at the head of the double column of battleships swinging at anchor in horrid formation over the fairway of the roads. From the flagship Wyoming at the head of the column to the bulky auxiliary lying below, all ships were in holiday dress.

From the Wyoming out across the fairway swung the Utah, Florida, Arkansas, Delaware, Vermont, Connecticut, Kansas and Ohio, and further down in a group the auxiliaries Celtic, Sicily, Cyclops, Orion and Jason. The battleships were the pick of the navy.

Formal Ceremonies.
The ceremonies attending the sailing of the fleet were formal. For the time being the little Dolphin was the headquarters of the command-in-chief and from the big ships each captain followed the rear admiral to pay his respects to Assistant Secretary Roosevelt. With the secretary was a party of officials from Washington, including Assistant Secretary of State John E. Osborne, Assistant Secretary of War Henry Breckinridge, Assistant Attorney General Samuel J. Graham, John Clarke, treasurer of the United States; Commissioner of Corporations Joseph E. Davies and Senator Ewing.

After the official visit to the Dolphin the big battleships stood by to await the return calls to be paid by the secretary. As the tide swung in the straits ships swung down the channel, and as each vessel passed in review out to sea, the farewell salutes of the departing vessels were fired.

Health Talks

You who are in poor health—this is my message to you:

After you have tried all the nostrums, favorite prescriptions, new discoveries, and cure-alls in the catalog of medicine—after you have consulted the exponents of the various methods of healing, and tried all the "isms," after you have said "good-bye" to most of your money—come to me. I will use just plain common sense, natural methods, and put you on the road to recovery in a very short time and at comparatively trifling expense.

Or, wouldn't it be better to come to me in the first place, and save yourself the trouble, worry, expense and uncertainty of doubtful methods? A little investigation and a little thought on your part will prove to you the worth of my methods of treatment.

DISTRICT SOCIETIES' CONVENTION OPENED HERE THIS MORNING

More Than One Hundred Delegates and Singers Expected in City by This Evening—Musical Program.

With a representative attendance from all the societies in the southern district and all who take part in the literary portion of the program present, the convention of the Young People's Societies of the Norwegian Synod Lutheran church was opened at the Norwegian church on Madison street at ten o'clock this morning. Over one hundred are expected to be here by night and many more will come to this city tomorrow to attend the concert at the Congregational church. Beloit and Waterville have sent the largest delegations, there being about twenty in each. Others are here from Orfordville, Edgerton, Lee and Capron, Ill.

Devotional exercises conducted by the Rev. J. L. Lunde of Edgerton opened the program, and these were followed by the address of welcome by City Clerk J. P. Hammarlund and the response by the Rev. Lunde.

The Rev. Harry Olson of Milwaukee read a paper on "What We Stand for as a Church," and the Rev. J. C. K. Prens of Beloit spoke on "The Church at Work." Miss Jacobson presented a discussion of "Church Etiquette." The Rev. W. J. Johnson of Capron, former pastor of the local church, had as his subject "The Why and How of a Young People's Society."

The afternoon session began with a song service and after the reading of the more papers and their discussion officers and committees for the district were elected. The papers presented were "How Can a Member of a Young People's Society Assist the Pastor?" by Miss Amanda Pederson; "The Young People's Society Assisted by the Rev. W. K. Naesseth, Orfordville; "Our Spiritual Food, or What to Read," by the Rev. N. C. A. Garness, Waterville; "Our Church Papers," The Mission and Circulation," by the Rev. J. E. George, Lee, Ill. This evening at 7:30 o'clock a general concert rehearsal will be held at the Congregational church, and at 9:30 o'clock a reception to the visiting delegates is to be given at the Norwegian church. Dinner was served to the delegates today at the church basement and they will be accommodated in the same manner tomorrow. They are being entertained and given their meals at the homes of members of the church and their friends. The Twenty-five Thousand Club this afternoon treated the delegates to an automobile ride.

Tomorrow morning at 8:30 o'clock a service will be held in the Congregational church, conducted by the Rev. Harry Olson, and at ten o'clock another concert rehearsal will be held at the Norwegian church. The program for the public concert to be given at the Congregational church at 3 p. m. is as follows:

"Jehovah Reigns"—From "Athaliah" Chorus.
"The Radiant Morn"—Woodward Chorus.
"My Redeemer and My Lord"—Dudley Buck Vocal solo, Miss Lillian Rutlin.
"Three Lutheran Chorals"—From "St. Paul" Chorus.
"Forever With the Lord"—Gounod Chorus.
"Heaven"—Trinity church choir of Beloit.
"By the Waters of Babylon"—Charles Howell Vocal solo, Miss Lillian Rutlin.
"Gloria"—From "Twelfth Mass"—Mozart Chorus.
"The Heavens Are Telling"—Hayden Chorus.
"A Mighty Fortress Is Our God"—Chorus.
There will be no admission charge but a silver collection will be taken to pay expenses.

ROCK COUNTY JAIL IN GOOD CONDITION

That the Rock county jail is a modern institution where prisoners are well cared for is the substance of the report made to the state board of correction by J. S. Crowder, who inspected the jail last month and embodied in a letter to Sheriff C. S. Whipple from John S. Lewis, a member of the board. His letter is given in full and should be of interest to every citizen of the county.

Mr. Cassius S. Whipple, Sheriff of Rock County, Dear Sir: Mr. J. S. Crowder, one of the board's inspectors, reports that he inspected your county jail the 15th ult., finding you in charge of the same, and he states that he found it "a modern jail where prisoners are well cared for."

"It is gratifying to this board every time one of our inspectors makes a report like the foregoing, and it is a credit to the citizens of any county of which such a report can be truthfully made, as well as to the officials of the county."

"We congratulate you upon the high standards of conditions reported of your jail, and sincerely trust that the other public institutions in your county, over which this board has supervisory inspection are equally deserving of commendation."

"The Board of Control is working to secure an equally high standard of buildings, management and equipment in the other counties, and we desire to work in a united spirit of cooperation and emulation to accomplish these high standards, rather than by stronger measures or by condemnation."

"In conditions like yours, as indicated by our inspector's report, we trust that we may have your moral support and assistance in our efforts to secure changes for the better."

"Very cordially yours for the State Board of Control."

JOHN P. LEWIS.

TWO SOLOISTS GIVE CONCERT ON MONDAY

William Clare Hall, Tenor, and Miss Barbara Wait, Contralto, Appear Before Apollo Club.

A recital of more than usual interest will be given under the auspices of the Apollo Club, Monday evening, at Library Hall. The recital will be given by William Clare Hall, tenor, who is said to be one of the four really great tenors of Chicago. Mr. Hall has studied with Oscar Seagle and Jean de Reszke, who noticed the unusual qualities of voice of the young tenor and took him under their own personal supervision.

Since completing his studies in Europe and returning to America, he has delighted many audiences in the larger cities by his beautiful voice and the wonderful interpretation given his songs. He is a singer of charming gifts and physique in keeping with all the demands called for in grand opera work.

Miss Barbara Wait, contralto, will share with Mr. Hall the honors of the evening. She has for some time been a pupil of Mr. Hall and has firmly established herself in the estimation of critics as a singer fully competent to meet the most exacting demands. Her voice is pure, full, rich, resonant, and absolutely contralto in quality.

She has appeared as the soloist with the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra and has been requested by Andrea Dippel of the Chicago Grand Opera, who heard her sing, to prepare herself on certain roles with a view of engaging her for grand opera.

Miss Florence Hensstern of Chicago, the accompanist for the above artists, will possibly play one solo number.

This number promises as it does an evening's entertainment of rare enjoyment. It is hoped that every member of the Apollo Club will be present.

Deadly Sameness.

"Why so gloomy?" inquired the bachelor friend. "You used to tell me that married life was one grand, sweet song!" "And so it is," replied the gloomy one. "To be more exact, it's one grand sweet refrain—refrain from cards, refrain from smoking, refrain from going to the club, refrain from drinking and refrain from opening my pay envelope until I get home!"

Connolly Harrington.

Connolly Harrington, banker of Siloam Springs, Ark., who started life as a journeyman printer, recently sold the sixty-acre village of Felter, Ark., to a Kansas City concern. Since then the village has grown and flourished.

LINK AND PIN WESTERN ENGINEERS DEMAND HIGHER PAY

Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen Unite for More Wages—Mountain Men Start Fight.

Forty thousand engineers and firemen on the ninety western railroads have cooked the books and companies, through union representatives, for an increase in wages aggregating about fifty million dollars. It appears, according to the local railroad men, that the engineers operating in the Rocky Mountain lines are the men behind the fight for more wages and up to the present time there has been no agitation for an increase in wages by either the firemen or engineers on this section.

The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen have heretofore been distinct unions and transacted their business without regard to each other, but each of the brotherhoods have asked, through their chiefs, W. S. Stone, for the engineers, and W. S. Carter, for the firemen, that the officials of both unions act as a unit. This means that in case of any increase of salary, that both the engineers and firemen will be given a proportionate increase and the company will not be able to increase the salary of one without doing the same to the other.

Want Ten Per Cent Raise.

The request for higher pay comes as a result of the increase given engineers on the Eastern lines because of the strike in which the engineers were successful after a long fight. The roads west of Chicago and east of the Rocky mountains have always paid their engineers higher than the eastern group and the engineers of the west demand that they maintain this rate. The roads in the mountain district pay a higher rate than from Chicago to St. Louis and the engineers of the more severe conditions and harder and more dangerous work.

The demands are for an increase of wages of engineers and firemen of from 25 cents to $1.00 for every hundred miles run, and time and a half for overtime. The latter desire to be credited with a fifteen miles run for every hour overtime. Officers of the western roads figure that the demand will mean a ten per cent increase in money paid to the engineers. At present passenger engineers on western lines receive $4.15 to $5.60 per hundred miles, and freight engineers $4.15 to $5.60 per hundred miles. Passenger firemen receive $2.40 to $4.00 per hundred miles, and freight firemen from $2.40 to $4.25 for a hundred miles. Passenger engineers and firemen make a greater mileage and are therefore higher paid. One hundred miles is considered an average day for freight engineers.

Have Reached Limit.

Officers of the western road say that they have reached the limit of wages and that the large expenditures are needed to safeguard travel and shipping and this can not be done by paid in unreasonable wages. The government cutting the tariff rates on both passenger and freight, the roads cannot afford to meet the demand, it is claimed.

Not much has been done over the matter by the railway engineers and little trouble is expected here unless the union gives orders to strike. The men here appear well satisfied at the present rate but will be brought into the fight if the western engineers force their demands on the eastern engineers. If the controversy is carried through and the brotherhood orders a strike, the west will be crippled to a great extent and it will mean a great deal to Janesville, but the St. Paul and Northern Pacific roads having division engineers, on the three divisions of each road.

TWO CARS DERAILED NEAR FIVE POINTS

Broken Brake-beam Ditches Two Cars on Crossing Switch Below the Northwestern Station.

A dragging break-beam striking the guard rails, the switch above the Five Points derailed two loaded freight cars on the Northwestern time freight No. 584 last night at 10:30 o'clock. The freight, which operates from Duraboo to South Janesville, was traveling at a slow speed, when the beam caught, or a more serious derailment would have resulted.

The first car jumped the track but stayed upright. The second car, a loaded refrigerator, wedged in between the ditcher car in front and the mass of cars behind, crossed the switch and was thrown over on its side. Both cars remained coupled, the beams being twisted in a semi-circle. Had the accident occurred twenty feet further, the switchmen's shanty would have been demolished. No passenger trains were delayed as a wrecking crew was brought to the Five Points, and the cars cleared up in time for the midnight mail train to go over the line.

CHANGES MADE IN STAFF ON NORTHWESTERN LINE

Robert Quayle has been appointed general superintendent of motive power and car department of the Chicago and Northwestern railway. He is succeeded by H. T. Bentley as superintendent of motive power and machinery.

C. W. Johnson, chief engineer of the Northwest lines of the system, with headquarters in St. Paul, becomes consulting engineer, and Herman Rettinghouse, chief engineer. All of the appointments become effective November 1.

Mr. Quayle in his new work assumes charge of the car department as well as the locomotive and will have jurisdiction over the shops of the company. He has been with the road forty-two years, starting as a machinist's apprentice. He was appointed master mechanic in 1885 and superintendent of motive power in 1894.

E. B. Hall, master mechanic; E. H. Chairman Joseph Smith has completed all preparations for the event, and it promises to be attended by a large crowd. The shops are shut down today, to give the men plenty of time to prepare anything further which

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

I am writing this testimonial in appreciation of the wonderful work J. N. Imlay, the local Chiropractor, did.

Up to the time of my call at his office I was a slave to the medicine bottle. In my years of ailment I have taken patent medicines and the best of physicians have prescribed for me without benefit.

The physicians told me I was on the verge of Bright's disease. With the thought of this dreaded disease gradually taking my life, I was very nervous, had almost constant headaches, and weak eyes. Giving up all hopes, after trying all forms of medical and drugless treatments, a friend told me to call on J. N. Imlay.

It is with the greatest pleasure for me to tell those who may read this testimonial, that I am now free from the above mentioned disorders. I have gained fifteen pounds in weight and feel like a new man. It is my sincere wish that anyone suffering as I did, will call on the Chiropractor, J. N. Imlay, and have his or her health restored permanently.

Yours very truly,

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian tube. When this tube is inflamed, you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh of the Eustachian tube, which is often called "Rhinoiditis" because it is an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the nose.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness caused by Catarrh of the Eustachian tube, that cannot be cured by our method.

GOAL KICKING SAVES MANY MINOR ELEPHANTS

Big Universities Having Hands Full Downing Smaller Colleges.—Large Scores Rolled.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] New York, Oct. 25.—As the football season progresses the teams of big universities of both the east and middle west are finding it more difficult each week to keep their scores clear. Time was when the colleges forming the "Big Six" and "Big Nine" felt that their opponents had been blotted off the eleven of a minor institution scored upon their team. With the coming of the so-called open game conditions changed. Scoring against Yale, Harvard and Princeton in the east and Michigan, Minnesota and Chicago in the middle west is no longer uncommon. In most cases, however, the score is made via the aerial route and is due more to the personal kicking ability of one player than to the team as a whole.

During the early part of the present season such scores were frequent, and the manner in which the little teams were scoring on the big varsity elephants led to a discussion at a university club as to whether the modern kicking was more proficient in his particular part of football than in the past. It was consensus of opinion among the many former football stars present that, while the average college dropped-kicker had advanced, the famous punters and kickers of the past were in no danger of losing the laurels to which their brilliant performances entitled them.

In order to prove their contention the old-timers quoted some authenticated field goals scored from drop and placement kicks that startled the youngsters about the table. It was agreed that the 53-yard drop kick made by Pat O'Dea of Wisconsin, in the game with Northwestern in 1898, formed the record for this method of scoring, while J. T. Haxell of Princeton, held the record for a goal from placement with his 65-yard score against Yale in 1882. J. V. Cowling, of Harvard, was credited with a 55-yard field goal in the game with Princeton in 1893, and J. E. Duffy of Michigan, with a similar feat against Cornell in 1891. Getting down to modern times in football play records were produced to show that John DeWitt, the famous Princeton guard and kicker, scored two 50-yard placement field goals in 1902, one against Yale and the other against Cornell. Just to show that such feats are occasionally accomplished in the present game, the case of H. A. Pumphrey of last year's Yale team was cited. His sensational feat of tying the score for Yale in the Princeton game of 1912 with a drop-kick of 49 yards puts him well up in the list of successful field goal scorers at unusual distances. Goals from both placement and by drop kick of 45 yards and less are comparatively common. The records show that Alex Moffat, Princeton, G. Capron, Minnesota; James Thorpe,

International Play for Davis Cup Will be Held at Some American City Next Year.

With international play for the Davis tennis cup assured for this country in 1914 there is already considerable rivalry between Boston, New York, Philadelphia and Chicago for the matches next season, and a keen contest is expected when the matter comes before the National Lawn Tennis Association in February.

The Longwood Cricket Club, near Boston, where the challenge round for the cup was played in this country and which resulted in an English victory, is understood to be an active bidder for the matches of 1914. The Crescent Athletic Club of Brooklyn, where Davis cup matches were played in 1902, is again in the field for the big event next year, while Philadelphia and Chicago are anxious for a chance to see the international preliminary or final matches.

Judging from present information the United States National Lawn Tennis Association will have at least a dozen challenges to consider at the annual meeting to be held within the next three months. England, Australia, Canada, Belgium and Germany are all said to have announced, in an informal way, their determination to challenge France, Mexico, Switzerland and South Africa are also possibilities. The attitude of the English tennis officials is pessimistic, so far as a winning outlook is concerned, but they have gone record as saying that regardless of their fortune chance they will send a team to this country next summer.

The trouble with English tennis at this time appears to be the lack of youth and natural playing ability among the leading representatives of that country. A famous tennis authority in discussing the situation and outlook said recently: "None of the top rankers is a natural genius like Renshaw, Doherty or Pitt. Smith in a previous decade, has reached his present position by exploitation of muscle and stamina, aid of a similar character are doubtless in the making, and when they arrive we shall hail them, as we do Mr. Parke and those who model their game on his lines, as international representatives. But, if we are wise, we shall continue to look for the talent which has the hall-mark of youth and natural ability to commend it."

WINTER SPORTS SOON ATTENTION OF FANS

Followers of Sport Turning Attention From Baseball to Hockey, Polo and Basketball.

With the passing of baseball and football the followers of sport are turning their attention to forms of indoor competition popular during the winter months. There is already much activity evident among the hockey players and the indications point to a season of unusual popularity for the Canadian game. In those cities where artificial rinks or freezing weather is assured the schedule makers are busy preparing long lists of exhibition and championship playing dates.

Plans are under way for the opening of the amateur league seasons in New York, Boston, Syracuse, Cleveland, St. Paul, Montreal and Toronto and the managers of the various college sevens have already booked a number of exhibition and inter-varsity matches.

The Intercollegiate Hockey League appears unlikely to be revived but Yale, Harvard and Princeton will play a round-robin series of three games against each of the two other colleges and both Cornell and Columbia will have sevens on the ice. Harvard will meet some of the best of the Canadian amateur teams at the Boston rink and there will also be several international matches at New York between the leading athletic sevens and those of the Canadian amateur organizations. Yale and Princeton expect to make the usual Christmas trips to Cleveland and other middle western cities, playing exhibition games against local teams and possibly inter-varsity practice matches.

DUCKS WILL BE HERE FOR LOCAL NIMRODS

Cold Weather Drives Vanguard of Flocks Down.—Rabbit Hunting is Reported Good.

One more week of cold weather and the ducks will be here by the thousands, is the opinion of Janesville hunters, who have anxiously waited for signs of the northward flight of birds from the northland. The last three or four cold days have driven many of them southward, but these are only the vanguard of the mighty flock to follow.

With better weather the ducks will show no great speed in leaving this section of the country for the south but will linger here until cold sets in. Lake Koshkonong report good shooting but not as heavy as expected next week. Canvas backs and taut are here in limited numbers with a few mallards and wood duck. Geese are failing to put in an appearance in sufficient quantities to grant good shooting and it will be another month before it is cold enough to send the honkers to the waiting nimrods.

Penny State has found a corking good drop kicker in Craig, one of the substitute backs.

Referee Joe Pendleton says that Ted Coy was a hard nut to tackle. Dave Campbell, captain and end of the 1901 Harvard team, has joined the coaching staff at Cambridge.

Goldberg, the big Brown lineman of the past few years, is assisting Jake High in coaching the New York university squad.

The brilliant playing of Charley Brickley, the Harvard back, indicates that he will be an All-American back again this year.

Altoona, Pa., has a football team composed of old Carlisle Indian school stars, among whom are Arcassa, Powell and the younger Wheelock.

Philbrick Minds, of the Penn eleven, is very clever at forward passing, throwing as he would a baseball and very accurately for distances varying from 20 to 40 yards.

When Harvard meets Princeton on the Tigers' field next month, there will probably be a morning attraction furnished by the Crimson and Tiger freshmen teams.

In Captain Fleming, Indiana University boasts of the most versatile player the game has ever known. He has played every position on the football and basketball teams, and filled all places on the baseball nine with the exception of pitcher and catcher.

The Family Cough Medicine

In every home there should be a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery, ready for immediate use when any member of the family contracts a cold or a cough. Prompt use will stop the spread of sickness. S. A. Suid, of Mason, Mich., writes: "My whole family depends upon Dr. King's New Discovery as the best cough and cold medicine in the world. Two 50c bottles cured me of pneumonia." Thousands of other families have been equally benefited and depend entirely upon Dr. King's New Discovery to cure their coughs, colds, throat and lung troubles. Every dose helps. Price, 50c and $1.00. All druggists. H. D. Bucklin & Co. Philadelphia or St. Louis.

EASTERN ELEPHANTS FEAR DARTMOUTH

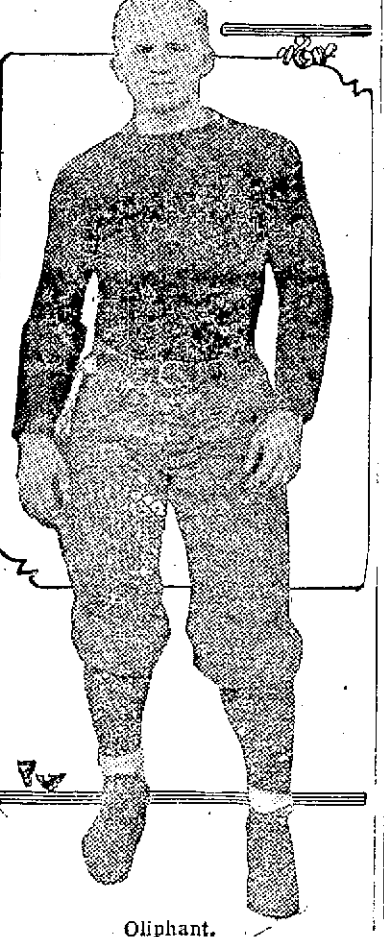

Captain Hogsett.

The hardest proposition which the mighty quartet of eastern colleges—Yale, Harvard, Princeton and Cornell—will have to contend with during the present football season is the plucky little Dartmouth eleven. Captain R. N. Hogsett of Dartmouth is confident he can duplicate last year's defeat of Cornell, and hopes that when his team meets Harvard and Princeton he will wrest victory from these two opponents, or at least hold them to a low score.

TEAM ACCOMPANIED BY 300 FANS LEFT FOR BELOIT TODAY

Largest Delegation in Many Years Go to Line City for Crucial Contest—Sure J. H. S. Will Win.

Three hundred rooters, composed of high school students, business men, and local fans, left this noon for Beloit, where they will extend their most hearty aid in bringing home a victory over the heavy Beloit high school eleven. The Janesville eleven were never in better shape, and the fans feel that a victory is not far away.

About half of the number who made the trip departed in automobiles, while the rest took to the interurban route. The day will be a glorious one if the eleven from here pulls away to a win, which will materially strengthen their chances for attaining a place in the running for the state title.

The team were well trained with a score or more of speedy open trick plays, and with an average speed, they should play Beloit off their feet, and return victors. The game was scheduled to start at two-thirty. The lineup as announced is as follows: Smiley, I. C.; Hemming, I. T.; Badger, J. G.; Mount, C. J.; Jones, R. G.; McVicar, R. T.; Stewart, R. OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

I've not met many idle rich—Most folks I know with money keep on the job to take the stitch in the belt. It is funny, just looking round the village store I've seen a lot of idle poor.

I've seen them sit and whittle things for hours. And curse their luck, with mutterings Against the Money Power. And swear the thing which kept them poor Was that some other folks had more.

Their wives were taking washing in. To keep the wolf from biting. While they would gather there to spin Sad yarns about the slights. Though bravely they would sit and wait.

And I can't help but often think That all long-winded shirkers Would have less grouch and far more chink. If they were only workers. For Better Times won't strike them. For those who're sitting while they wait.

—Kansas City Star.

Someone said a long time ago that "It's no disgrace to be poor, but mightily inconvenient." There is no question about the "inconvenience," but the "disgrace" depends upon circumstances.

The man who suffers the pangs of poverty because of misfortune, for which he is not responsible, is not disgraced, and a friendly word sympathizes, but does not censure.

He may be side-tracked by the way through infirmities, and the home deprived of the bread-winner, may be confronted with dire want, but no disgrace attaches.

The much larger class is composed of homes that suffer because the mainstay of the family squanders his income in dissipation, with no thought of obligation. Men who never have a dollar over night. There are many homes of this kind, especially in the larger cities, and every community has its share. This kind of poverty is always a disgrace to the man responsible, and it means humiliation to the home.

You will notice that this class of men are always the loudest talkers about the inequalities of wealth. Their tongues are hung in the middle ready to go off at the slightest provocation, and what they don't know about how the government and everything else ought to be run is hardly worth mentioning.

Representatives of this class are found in every channel of work. They infest the commercial as well as the industrial world, barnacles on the great body-politic. What they need more than anything else is a guardian. They furnish many recruits for the police courts and jails, and more of them should enjoy the benefits of the new law recently enacted in Wisconsin.

This law makes the sheriff of the county a guardian for all men committed for minor offenses, with authority to find work for them anywhere in the county, collect their wages, and turn them over to dependents, if any.

That it is proving a blessing, not only to unfortunate homes, but to the men themselves, is clearly demonstrated by Sheriff Whipple of Rock county, in recent experiences.

One of his wards, committed not long ago, was an expert workman from Beloit. He was on the pay roll at three dollars and a half per day, but frequent sprees and loss of time left but little for the support of the family. Now, serving a ninety day sentence, and paroled by the sheriff, and back to work, he spends his spare time at home, fixing up the house, and when the officer called with the pay check, the other day, the wife said: "That's more money than I've seen for many a day!" and then added in a tone of appreciation: "This experience is going to put John on his feet, and life begins to seem as it did in the old days."

Another man, working at fourteen dollars per week, seldom had a dollar for his family, until the sheriff became his guardian. Now the wife has the wages, and the man, restored to manhood, is on the way to permanent reform. There are many people who never commit minor offenses, who would be infinitely better off with a guardian, because they lack the faintest conception of the value of money. It may not be squandered for drink, but that is only one form of dissipation.

It is worth something to know how to live within an income, and show a balance on the right side of the ledger, at the end of the year. When more of us learn the trick, there will be less poverty, and less complaint about the unequal distribution of wealth.

The new federal income tax will disclose some figures in regard to wealth, that will be a little surprising. The government has already made a preliminary survey with a view to finding out about how much money the tax will yield, as a revenue producer, to make good the losses caused by tariff reduction.

The income tax applies only to incomes of three thousand dollars or more, and of the ninety million people in this country, statistics recently compiled, show that less than half a million will be subject to the tax. When the fact is considered that this includes all the great blocks of capital engaged in business, as well as the "idle rich" it is easy to understand that this class of idlers is numerically very small.

The federal income tax skips the ten million farmers of the country, almost to a man. It will touch very lightly, if at all, the hundreds of thousands of trades people in the towns and villages and smaller cities.

Professional men will not feel it, to any great extent, and salaried people as well as high priced skilled artisans in the industrial world, will be practically exempt.

The little army of very poor people, in this land of plenty, that is the people who are poverty-stricken, through no fault of their own, is no larger than the little army, at the other end of the line, who are subject to a federal income tax. Between these two extremes, the most of us live, and we ought to be happy.

We have no grievance against the farmer who produced for the nation nine billion dollars in new wealth this year. The professional man, the salaried man, and the skilled artisan, do not annoy us, for we feel that they are entitled to liberal compensation.

Our grievance is against the little coterie of men at the top, who through inheritance or marked ability, have acquired fortunes, and this grievance is so pronounced that we demand laws and regulations which are so stringent, that in many cases they amount to confiscation.

In our eagerness to regulate every thing in sight, we ignore the fact that the great fortunes of the country are largely invested in public utilities for the public good. Judge Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the United States Steel Corporation, said some very true things yesterday in an address to the semi-annual meeting of the American Iron and Steel Institute.

Judge Gary is a conservative, level-headed financier. He was not talking for effect, but he voiced the business sentiment of the country when he said:

"It is not uncommon in public discussion to treat success as an offense; to consider the possession of wealth, however honestly acquired, as wrong. Legislation calculated to create classes is urged persistently, also laws to impose unnecessary and unreasonable burdens; to forcibly take from one something which he has and is entitled to have and turn it over to another; to prevent or to lessen the success of legitimate enterprise and endeavor.

"Capital, always timid, has been seriously affected by this unreasonable and uncalled for agitation and attack. Indeed, it is becoming frightened. Confidence has been shaken. It is becoming almost impossible to secure, on fair terms, on good security and at a reasonable rate of interest, the necessary capital to equip or liberally maintain going and successful properties, to say nothing of the additions and extensions which the interests of this great and growing country demand."

This is not a threat, but it is a plain statement of conditions as they exist today, from a man who stands at the head of the greatest industry in the country. And yet our patriots, both large and small, think that they know it all, and imagine that they are serving the best interests of the dear people.

STATE PRESS.

Some Recompense.

It will be worth a good deal to the suffragists of this country to see how weak and commonplace Mrs. Pankhurst is without her firebrands and brickbats.—Wausau Record-Herald.

Throw Doubt on Genuine.

Governor Sulzer, we are sorry to say, was one of those pleasing progressive hypocrites, who when found out do more harm to any real progress than do a half-acre of so-called standpats or reactionaries.—Eau Claire Leader.

Crawfish Progress.

The New York "progressives" who are going to run Sulzer as a candidate for the legislature have funny ideas of reform. "Progressive" in this instance is just what the crawfish would call progress, viz., traveling tail first.—Sheboygan Journal.

Suspicious Satisfaction.

The pending currency bill may have its faults. It wouldn't be a currency bill if it didn't. But the fact remains that there are not a few suspicious persons in this great country who are car shy when it comes to the subject of bankers and who would look askance at a currency bill that had the unanimous approval of the organized money lenders of the country.—Oshkosh Northwestern.

Faint Demarkation.

It is hard to locate the dividing line between plain, legitimate diplomacy and "dollar" diplomacy begins. This country now professes to have abandoned "dollar" diplomacy, but there seems so little change in the methods used by diplomats that it is the general opinion it is only the name that has been abandoned.—Marinette Eagle Star.

Huber Law Workings.

Janesville and Beloit are discovering that the strict enforcement of the Huber law, sentencing men without visible means of support to long terms at work, is having a good effect in two directions. Confirmed tramps, whose dislike of labor in any form is ingrained, are giving Janesville and Beloit a wide berth, and habitual alcoholics are leaving for other places where their peril of rigorous treatment will be less imminent. On the other hand, many of the men sent into the country to work remain at their jobs after their terms have expired.—Evening Wisconsin.

Mistaken Surmise.

If we "get" Collier's Weekly right, it takes the ground that the reduction of the tariff is bound to result in disappointment to the people, after which there will be a rush to the new green-and-yellow Bull Moose bandwagon. A poor guess. When the people find that Dr. Wilson's patent free trade pain killer and hair restorer makes 'em ache worse, they will return to the old reliable G. O. P. brand.—Wausau Record-Herald.

And not wear clothes that give us a three-cornered pain;
That you will be as modest as you used to be.

One Ready Letter Writer.

We believe in the conservation of ink and typewriter ribbons. There is too much waste in being polite. A man is apt to write fifteen or twenty unnecessary words in a letter in order to soothe the feelings of the person addressed. That is a mistake. This busy age, and having received numerous inquiries we would present the following formulas in up-to-date letter writing:

Tell the truth at all times.
A dunning letter should read as follows:

"John Smith: D'r Sir: A man who doesn't pay his bills is a thief. Come across at once or we sue you."

A reply to a letter asking credit: "Hiram Hikes & Co., Gent's: If you can't pay cash, get out of business and give somebody else a chance. If we extended credit to all should read as follows: the boneheads we would go bankrupt."

You give us a triangular pain. "HOOPOL COUNTY GLUE CO."

When a magazine editor declines a manuscript he usually uses two or three sheets of white paper and about four thousand polys but unnecessary words. It should be cheaper to write as follows:

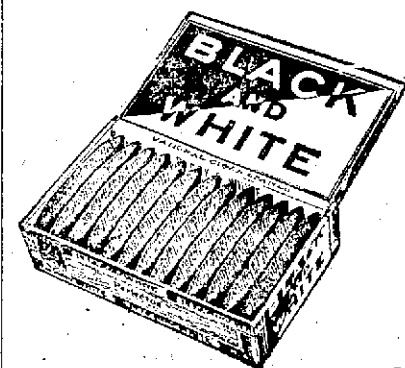

"Dear Sir: Your stiff punk. Get a job in a livery stable. Yours, EDITOR BUNKUM MAGAZINE." Instead of the long flowery letter declining an invitation a note should be written as follows: "Dear Madam: I decline your invitation. We cannot afford to associate with anybody who drives a four cylinder car instead of a six." "MRS. FITZGERALD FITZMAURICE FITZHUGH."

Helpful Household Hints.

To strain milk, hang one end of the milk on a nail near the ceiling and let a heavy weight to the other end of the milk. Providing the weight is heavy enough it will strain the milk if left hanging over night, but care should be taken not to leave the milk hanging too long, as the weight might break it.

To keep the cat off the dinner table, take the cat firmly by the neck and chuck it into a meal sack, tie the mouth of the sack firmly, attach four or five paving bricks to it and drop it into the river. Your dinner will then be perfectly safe until the cat gets back, which is usually in twenty or thirty minutes.

According to Uncle Abner. No matter how hard they try, no feller will ever invent anything harder to throw at a cat than an old-fashioned bootjack.

The book agent has passed away, but the automobile salesman more than takes his place. So long as a feller's automobile horn is up to date, it don't make much difference what kind of a cat he has got.

To Keep Ice.

When it is desirable to keep ice in the sickroom, this will be found a very good plan: Get a large, wide-mouthed jar, tie a piece of coarse flannel over it, making it loose and bag-like in the center. Now put the ice in this bag and cover it with another piece of flannel, folded three or four times. It will keep better this way than by any other method. When you require to break it, use a coarse darning needle or a fine knitting needle, giving it a gentle tap with a hammer.

Duty.

One sound always comes to the ear that is open; it is the steady drum-beat of Duty. No music in it, perhaps—only a dry rub-a-dub. Ah, but that steady beat marks the time of the whole orchestra of earth and heaven! It says to you: "Do your work—do that duty nearest you!" Keep step to that drum-beat, and the dullest march is taking you home.—George S. Merriam.

RETAIL LICENSES MAY BE REQUIRED LOCAL BREWERIES

City May Have $500 Coming From Each of Local Plants Which Sell to Non-licensed Customers.

That the city of Janesville has $1,000 in liquor license money coming from each of the local breweries, is the opinion of city officials to whose attention was brought the recent ruling of Attorney General Owen which is to the effect that a brewing company is prohibited from selling liquor except to a licensed dealer. The only alternative for the breweries would be to discontinue the practice of selling and delivering beer to private customers throughout the city, although they have done business in this manner for years without the local breweries the same as is exacted of the out of town agencies, three of which are maintained in this city and which pay the regular $500 retail license fee.

It remains a fact that the question has not been raised in the city before and the breweries have been enjoying the same privilege as the agencies as far as delivering beer to customers is concerned, without paying the retailers' license. The local plants have evidently been operating with a special privilege extended because they were local industries. When it is pointed out that this practice is illegal, in the opinion of the attorney general, a settlement in favor of the city is in the air.

The ruling was called for by M. E. Dillon, city attorney at Ashland, where the question was raised as to whether a brewery could sell its bottled goods to private consumers, without a license.

"It is rather peculiar that the brewery agencies have not complained of the matter," said Mr. Dougherty. "There must have been some question about it. At any rate it is something which will bare investigation."

"Our practice previously has been governed by an opinion of a former attorney general," explained Mayor Fathers when asked concerning the situation.

BRIEF LOCAL NEWS.

At Genoa: George Hatch's full orchestra played an engagement last evening for a Genoa, Illinois, dancing party.

Special Train: A special train of four cars, trimmed in gold and black, representing Beloit college colors, passed through this city this morning at eight o'clock, bound for Appleton.

The engine was draped with large streamers and beautiful blankets with Beloit spelled out in many places. The train was more than half-crowded with rosters, together with the college band. The Beloit-Lavaca game is attracting much interest throughout the state.

Twelve Take Exams: Twelve teachers wrote examinations at the office of County Clerk Q. D. Antick today for the purpose of raising the grade of their certificates or to make up back work.

Pleasantly Surprised: Last evening the Ladies' societies of the Congregational church surprised their janitor, Mr. Mayhew, and his daughter, Miss Ada Mayhew, with a shower of canned fruit, groceries and money. Refreshments were served and the meeting proved an enjoyable and successful affair.

Paint Cell Room: Sheriff C. S. Whipple is having the interior of the cell room on the first floor of the jail painted by the two prisoners who occupy it, Myers Barrett, the dining car waiter sentenced for a term of eleven months, and Albin Voight of Edgerton, sentenced to six months for assault and battery.

Strange Human Food: The Chinese get a very palatable food from the chrysalis of the silk worm. The poor removes the envelope, broil the chrysalis and eat it with salt and pepper. In the homes of wealth, however, the chrysalis is fried in lard, butter or oil, and mixed with the yolk of an egg. But the strangest of all food is the larvae of a certain fly, common in California and known as the Ephedra. The flies are washed on the shore in windrows and can be collected in bushel baskets. The Indians gather them, dry them and grow fat on them.

What She Did: Mrs. Exe—"While I was going downtown on the car this morning, the conductor came along and looked at me as if I had not paid my fare."

Mrs. Exe—"Well, what did you do?" Mrs. Exe—"I looked at him as if I had."

ABANDONMENT CASE AND DIVORCE TRIAL

Family Troubles of Former Janesville Man Will be Given Thorough Airing in Rockford Court.

Northern Illinois and southern Wisconsin is watching with considerable interest the trial of Clara E. Church, who resided in this city some time ago at 320 Race street, and whose parents are residents of this city at present. Church is employed as an engineer on the C. & N. Q. railroad through Rockford, and was employed on one of the Janesville roads before going to Rockford.

Church was arrested several months ago for wife abandonment and made the defendant in a bill for divorce, making a serious charge against his wife. Following his wife's arrest last week in the home of another man at Marion, Iowa, it developed that Church had detectives trailing her for a number of weeks. It is claimed that Church had not been living with his wife for several years, but has supported her until his suspicions as to her fidelity were aroused. He then refused to support her and she went to Rockford and lived there for some time.

Church was placed under bond pending the action of the grand jury investigation and a separate maintenance bill was filed in the circuit court. The other man in the case is revealed to be G. W. Vandercok, a passenger conductor on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad and at one time had a run through this city and is well known here. Sensational evidence has been given in the case, the detectives shadowing the pair and this led to their arrest on the adultery charge at Marion. When the sheriff started to serve the warrant on Vandercok and G. W. Vandercok refused to open the door of the room where he had locked himself and threatened to shoot the first intruder. The door was forced and he failed to carry out his threat.

At the present time there is legal action for a bill for separate maintenance, the answer, and a cross divorce bill to be settled between Mr. and Mrs. Church at the Rockford court. The trial is expected to develop some startling testimony.

VAN HISE COMMENTS APPROVED BY USHER

MILWAUKEE WRITER AGREES AS TO WORKINGS OF THE SHERMAN LAW.

REMEDY IS A PROBLEM

Radical Experiments of New Character Probable.—Prominent Deaths of the Week.

(By Ellis B. Usher.) Milwaukee, Oct. 25.—At Philadelphia on Wednesday last, President Van Hise of the University of Wisconsin, delivered an address before the American Auditing Council, in which he attacked the Sherman law and said that our way out of present confusion is competition, permission of monopoly under co-operative methods, with state regulation, and national regulation where the industries are national in scope. He said, truly, that the courts have not really accomplished anything under the Sherman law, and called attention to what has long been apparent, that the local butchers, the meat, and retail grocers are violating every principle of the Sherman law every day, just as flagrantly as the steel trust, or the railroad, and that the selection of one or two big violators for prosecution, and the closing of the eye as to other big ones, and all the small ones, is a species of hypocrisy that makes the prosecutions and the regulations which the industries are national in scope. He said, truly, that the courts have not really accomplished anything under the Sherman law, and called attention to what has long been apparent, that the local butchers, the meat, and retail grocers are violating every principle of the Sherman law every day, just as flagrantly as the steel trust, or the railroad, and that the selection of one or two big violators for prosecution, and the closing of the eye as to other big ones, and all the small ones, is a species of hypocrisy that makes the prosecutions and the regulations which the industries are national in scope. He said, truly, that the courts have not really accomplished anything under the Sherman law, and called attention to what has long been apparent, that the local butchers, the meat, and retail grocers are violating every principle of the Sherman law every day, just as flagrantly as the steel trust, or the railroad, and that the selection of one or two big violators for prosecution, and the closing of the eye as to other big ones, and all the small ones, is a species of hypocrisy that makes the prosecutions and the regulations which the industries are national in scope.

This week has been made notable by the deaths of two men who have made their names in the public eye. One was a newspaper man, the other was a politician. Both were men of great ability and great energy. Their deaths are a great loss to the community. The newspaper man was a man of great ability and great energy. The politician was a man of great ability and great energy. Their deaths are a great loss to the community.

Both of these lives suggest the difference between a man of natural and unaffected sincerity and the tawdry plumage of the climber. I could not help running my mind's eye back to the beginning of my acquaintance with the man who turned to a Blue Book of 1876, my first experience in Madison. The diagram of the assembly shows at the corner of the names of the men who were in the assembly. I remember the names of the men who were in the assembly. I remember the names of the men who were in the assembly. I remember the names of the men who were in the assembly.

It appears, if the reports from Madison are reliable, that the state taxes are being levied with great efficiency and accomplishment. It is not free from troubles that beset all roads now. It cannot keep clear of labor troubles and increasing costs due to new laws and higher wages, nor the expense of maintaining the government. But its troubles are the general ones and not due to slack administration. There is an illustration of what I mean. Each year the state tax on the average is about 67 cents more than it did four years ago, although the average revenue per ton of coal has declined from 0.586 cents in 1909 to 0.574 cents in 1913. The grain mill increase has, of course, been brought about by heavier car and train loadings. This same improvement, also has resulted in a slight increase in the cost of carrying the company business, and this effect is almost entirely the effect of higher wages now paid and other similar conditions.

TRAIN DETECTIVES TO BE ABOLISHED

Northwestern System Will Discontinue Auditing Concern's Checkers on Trains November First. To create a better feeling among conductors and trainmen the management of the Chicago & Northwestern Railway will, on November 1, abolish the detective system of the White Auditing Company, which has been in operation for a year or two. The White is an outside concern, contracting to furnish detectives or "checkers" as they are called, to surprise conductors on all parts of the system and go over their accounts on the spot. Being employees of an outside concern the management of the Chicago & Northwestern had no voice in their employment and could not pay them as much as the company. The trainmen of the entire system strongly protested at the checkers, and it is said that several of the older conductors were discharged as a result of the surprise, the trainmen alleging that slight discrepancies in amounts were used as grounds for dismissal.

"We are discontinuing the service of the White Auditing Company for two or three reasons," said an officer of the Northwestern road, "We have found that we can with our own men carry on the work of checking the conductors' accounts better than an outside concern. By using our own men we believe there will be a better feeling toward the company. The part of the trainmen. Another reason is a big financial saving to the company. There is no intention on the part of the Northwestern road to abandon the practice of auditing the accounts of its conductors. The new auditors, about twelve for the system, will report directly to the general superintendent. Various plans for keeping tabs on conductors have been tried. The old "spotter" system was the first and most fearful to the trainmen. Under this detectives reported conductors and the latter were discharged without ever facing their accusers. This method has been practically abandoned by all big systems as a result of vigorous protests by the railroad brotherhoods. A number of the roads use uniformed collectors, who take up and handle all tickets, leaving the conductor free to operate the train.

Religious Unity in India. It is pointed out as an instance of moslem toleration in India that in one of the Ouda districts a Christian congregation worships every Sunday in a church erected at the expense of a fine old Mahomedan Taluqdar, the late Jung Bahadur of Nampara, in memory of his friend and skilful comrade Colonel Maynard, for many years district superintendent of police in that district.

CALERO A LIKELY WINNER IN MEXICO

Manuel Calero.

If elections are held in Mexico on October 28, according to present plans, it is believed that Manuel Calero will be declared to be the choice of the people at the polls. Calero's influence has been growing rapidly during the past few weeks. He was formerly Mexican ambassador to the United States and if elected might succeed in gaining recognition from Washington.

Flour-Mixing Sieve. Mixing Rakes Move Back and Forth in Separate Chambers. A sieve that mixes flour thoroughly at the same time that it sifts it has been designed by a Missouri man. The sieve is a rectangular casing, with an open upper end, and is divided into three compartments, separated by screen partitions. The handle by which it is held is on one side, and on the adjacent side is a second handle operating the horizontal bars, one of which runs through each compartment. On the ends of these bars are rakes, which serve to agitate the flour when the handle is pulled in and out. The upper and lower bars are longer than the intermediate one, so that each rake moves across only half the surface of the screen, and the mixing is given a continuous backward and forward motion.

Business, Not Friendship. The friendship that keeps a ledger and is always balancing accounts is not friendship at all. The fear that one may give more to his brother than he receives from him, that must have every favor returned as though it were a loan, every gift, visit, invitation, even expression of affection, paid back in kind—that may be a pleasant business proposition, but it has no claim to be called friendship.—Great Thoughts.

Weaving the Web of Life. Life is the daily web of character we unconsciously weave. Our thoughts, imaginations, purpose, motives, love, will, are the underthreads; our words, tone of voice, looks, acts, habits, are the upper threads; and the passing moment is the shuttle, swiftly, ceaselessly, relentlessly, weaving those threads into a web; and that web is life.—S. D. Gordon.

Courtesy Simply Kindness. Courtesy is doing that which nothing under the sun makes you do but human kindness. Courtesy springs from the heart; if the mind prompts the action, there is a reason; if there be a reason, it is not courtesy, for courtesy has no reason. Courtesy is good will; and good will is prompted by a heart full of love to be kind.

Various Edible Insects. The Creoles of Bourbon are said to broil and eat the cockroach. Ants, cooked in various ways are eaten by many different tribes. The Africans cook them in butter while in Brazil a resinous sauce is used. The Siamese use the eggs of the ant. The white ant is eaten raw by some, while ant pie is a delicacy among some of the natives of India. The natives of Ceylon are said to eat bees and the Mexicans eat a cake made out of bees' eggs.

SUFFERED TWELVE YEARS CATARRH OF STOMACH

RELIEVED BY PERUNA

W. H. Shanks' Scottsburg, Ind., Home.

Most of our testimonials are old acquaintances. That is to say, we have been in correspondence with them ten or fifteen years.

Mr. Shanks, however, is a new comer. He is an old friend of Peruna, but he never called our attention to the fact until very lately. We welcome him to the host of users and believers in Peruna. His appearance speaks for itself, and his letter reads:

"It affords me great pleasure to inform you of the good results I have derived from the use of your excellent remedy, Peruna. I had catarrh of the stomach and bowels for twelve years and tried many remedies with only temporary relief. I was induced to try Peruna, and after taking six bottles I was completely relieved. I had taken almost three bottles before I could see that I was receiving any benefit, but when I had taken the six bottles I was completely relieved, and I feel very grateful to Peruna, and I have recommended it to quite a number of my friends. I still take a bottle every spring. My wife has used it with good results. You can use this or any part of it if you see fit.

Peruna is a great remedy, we believe. A standard household remedy. There are thousands, yes hundreds of thousands, of homes where it is in constant use. There are millions of other families who if they knew of Peruna and its value, would not be without a bottle in the home.

Those who object to liquid medicines can now procure Peruna Tablets.

CORLEY'S AID

BY WALTER GREGORY.

Something you want to ask for? Go ahead," she suggested kindly.

"It isn't about me," the girl answered hesitatingly. "And I don't know as I ought to say anything about it; but I do like you, and I don't want you to."

"Tell me, Corley," the other said, laying down the book, a little touched by the sober earnestness of the girl.

"I'll tell you just what it is. Mr. Shafner, who comes here, and whom you are engaged to—"

"Not quite yet, Corley. I haven't made up my mind," Miss Leighton said, smiling a little.

"It's about him; he's been writing love letters to a girl—wonderful love letters!"

The words were a sudden shock to the listening girl. It was true she had not given her promise to Shafner, but that she loved him she could not deny. It needed but a moment to make her feel that the maid was mistaken.

"But you don't know, Corley, whether he has or not," she said.

The girl shook her head. "Yes, I do," she said with firmness. "I've seen the letter, read it with my own eyes. It's written to a girl whose name is Ruth; it's a wonderful love letter!" the maid said, breathing a little rapidly.

"I don't see how it could come into your possession—"

"It didn't," the girl answered, her head drooping. "A friend got it. He works at the Frazier Company with Mr. Shafner. I don't know how he got it; but I'll get the letter from him, and show you."

"That—that would be best—I am sure," said Miss Leighton.

When the maid had gone, she leaned back in the big chair, book and all forgotten, a sense of something cool and quieting about her, and a sense, too, of a hurt, located somewhere, that might become pain.

For a moment she was determined not to believe that Robert Shafner would deliberately correspond in loving terms with another girl when so near and so close to her. But she knew that the ways of men are strange ways, and though her faith in him was strong, for the moment she was afraid.

It seemed hardly plausible that a letter of his could be secured, yet he might write in an idle moment in his office, and such a letter might be found—it might be among his waste-paper, but there because of some flaw. There was a chance, a small one—the chance that human hearts must always take into consideration though there are a thousand against it.

Later in the afternoon the maid came in, a little fearful, because she was in love herself with the bearer of the note to her, of what effect it might have on the beautiful girl she served.

One glance told the story to Mrs. Leighton. It was the same even, characteristic hand with which she had been familiar. It began with "Dearest Ruth," and went on into a tender love letter, brief but full of meaning, and made an offer of an engagement for the following night.

It was perfectly plain: it was his letter. He was in love with some one unknown to her; he was even meeting her, as the proposed engagement showed.

"Go, Corley," she said. "No, wait; did you ask—where this—was found?"

"Yes, Fred found it in the waste-paper basket. It was crumpled a little and there was a slight mark on it; so he thought Mr. Shafner did not send this one. He knew of you and Mr. Shafner through me, and he—"

"I see; thank you. Go, Corley, please," she said, and the girl went swiftly and gladly.

With the note crumpled in her hand, she sat down to think, to endeavor to plan some way to let him know—that she knew. It was not until that evening, he came not.

She went to the telephone and called the office, but as she expected, he had gone with the rest of the men. She found him at his room, and his cheery voice answered her question over the wire.

"Robert, I don't want you to come tonight; I will tell you why in a note I shall write you. With it I shall enclose another, Corley."

"But Marion, what—"

She hung up the receiver, setting off this answer.

She bravely went to her desk and drew paper in front of her, but her courage failed when the stress she had put upon it, the thought of him, her love for another dreamt of him, and with him. Picture and memory after memory came and went and they left her broken.

She was aroused by a step in the room, and turning, thinking it was one of the family, she saw him, tossing his hat into a chair.

"Your mother said to come up, so I have, Marion. I want to know what you meant by what—"

He came up to her, and she rose, drawing away from him; but he was taller and stronger than she, and she felt pitifully weak in her defiance.

"By what you said to me."

"Read this, and you'll see what ground I had," she answered in a low voice, holding out to him the note.

He took it, read it, stared at her, smiled and laughed. Then he caught her in his arms and held her.

"Listen, dear, I know now. But you are mistaken. I wrote that note for this reason. One of the ladies in the department, I discovered, trying to write a letter to his sweetheart during the noon hour. He was having a hard time of it, and I offered—kiddie—to help him, give him a form to use. So I wrote that out. He wanted to make a deal with her, he said, and I put it in. Some one brought up my sample copy of a love letter. That's all, dear. Were you hurt by thinking that I cared for any one but you?"

She nodded.

"Don't you think it would be best if you gave me your promise now, so that I shall never really write such a note, thinking that after all you care nothing for me?" he asked.

She nodded.

Force of Habit.

There was a noise down in the sil-ver closet.

"John," whispered the wife of the baseball umpire, "wake up. There is some one trying to reach the plate."

"Trying to reach the plate," echoed the umpire drowsily. "Well, for goodness sake let me see them or there'll be a kick over the decision and a thing you know the rosters will be gin throwing pop bottles."

No Liquids.

"These political meetings are taken," grumbled the tall tramp in the green shirt.

"Why so, pard?" asked his chum.

"Cause last night I went to a meetin' billed as an 'overflow meetin', and there wasn't nothin' overflowin'—not even root beer."

Don't Be A Goop! Utterly Wretched

Nervous Prostration Long Endured Before Remedy Was Found.

Miss Mervyn Keninger, Upper Bern, Pa., writes: "For several years I had nervous prostration, and was utterly wretched. I lived on bread and beef tea because my stomach would not retain anything else. I took many remedies, but obtained no relief until I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, when I began to gain at once. Am now cured."

Pure, rich blood makes good, strong nerves, and this is why Hood's Sarsaparilla, which purifies and enriches the blood, cures so many nervous diseases. Get it today in usual liquid form or chocolate tablets called Sarsatabs.

How to Split an Adverb.
On a recent rainy evening I caught the savor of the split adverb. It was in a tram-car, and the young lady from the sweet factory was anxious about her hat. She asked her companion—of course she could not see her own hat: "Is it spoilt absolutely-well-out-ly?"—London Chronicle.

Qualities of the Diplomat.
"What is a diplomat?" "A diplomat is a man who can make a lie seem more reasonable than the truth; can guess a woman's age without getting it too old or so young as to be absurd, and can do a man an injury and make him believe he has done him a favor."

Beverly T. Galloway (left) and Secretary Houston.

Secretary Houston of the U. S. department of agriculture, and his assistant, Beverly T. Galloway, have worked out an extensive program by which they hope to increase the American meat supply. The program includes: (1) The establishment of municipal abattoirs throughout the country; (2) the raising of stock by small farmers; (3) the formation of co-operative livestock associations by farmers in the east, south and middle west; (4) the formation of boys' pig clubs, similar to boys' corn clubs.

Mrs. James W. Gerard, wife of the United States ambassador to Germany, is now on her way to join her husband in Berlin. Mr. Gerard has declared his intention of treating all Americans in Berlin alike; and he and his wife will entertain them occasionally at the embassy.

MERRITT'S, LOSERS TO ROCKEFELLER, ON THE ROAD TO ANOTHER FORTUNE

Alfred and Leonidas Merritt of Duluth, Minn., who created a sensation two or three years ago by testifying before the Stanley Steel investigating committee that John D. Rockefeller and his associates had "done" them out of their holdings on the Mesaba range, may be on the road to another fortune. A tract of land near Deerwood, Minn., which they purchased recently for $1,200, is now believed to contain valuable iron deposits. The present estimated value of the property is $800,000.

Her Thought.
"D you know that a woman is capable of torturing a man with her cruelty and mockery without the faintest twinge of conscience, because she'll think every time she looks at him: 'I'm tormenting him to death now, but I'll make up for it with my love later.'—The Idiot, by Fyodor Dostoevsky. Translated by Constance Garnett. Heinemann.

To Clean an Oil Painting.
Sponge the painting carefully with pure soap and lukewarm water, squeezing the sponge fairly dry before using. Dry thoroughly with a soft cloth. Dip a bit of chamomile leather in sweet oil and rub over the painting, rubbing again with clean chamomile, or a bit of fine flannel.

Worth While in Reading.
Some one has suggested that a certain time set apart each Sunday shall be devoted to reading with a purpose. Not just a book picked up at random, and another on quite a different topic when that is finished. At the end of winter little definite mental advance is made from such a method. This winter take books relating, say, to one country, or to a painter and his pictures, or to any definite subject that attracts you, and read on that subject for even one or two hours each Sunday. In three months there will be definite mental results.

When She Starts to Wonder.
Many a young wife is discouraged by observing how much easier it was to get a $200 engagement ring than it is to get a check for the grocery bill.

The Economy of "One Man" Direction

IT IS obvious that a motor car manufacturer can build 50,000 cars at much less than he can build 1,000.

But the difference in quantity buying and quantity manufacturing are not the only elements of saving which can be effected.

Each factory has its own system, its own machinery, its own personnel. Some are still making cars of the old routine with the conventional methods and machinery. Some have advanced more or less and a few, a very few, are producing on the up-to-the-minute efficiency basis by special machinery and special methods particularly adapted to the size and type of the car being made.

We say without hesitation, and it is a fact well-known in the trade, that the great Overland plants are unquestionably the most thoroughly, efficiently and economically equipped and managed.

This great business has the advantage of the personal direction of one single man—the man who founded the business, the man who has grown up with it from the beginning, the man who developed it—John N. Willys.

Mr. Willys has clung steadfastly to the watchword "The most car for the least money." And each year he has more than made good this principle.

To produce a car of the Overland size, power, strength and high quality, and to sell that car for such a remarkably low price, has taxed, to the utmost, all the resourcefulness, foresight, ingenuity, untiring energy and wide experience of, not only Mr. Willys, but a veritable army of the industry's most able men.

Mr. Willys knows men, and it is well known that no manufacturing institution, perhaps in the world, can boast of a larger or more efficient and well-trained, well-paid, well-satisfied organization.

In the newest Overland increased value at a decreased price is more prominent and apparent than ever.

You will make a grave mistake if you fail to thoroughly examine our latest model.

October 25, 1913.—The barometric depression that was in the southeastern states yesterday has now advanced northeastward along the coast, attended by cloudiness and rainfall. These conditions prevail throughout all of the Atlantic seaboard. The depression that was over Wyoming yesterday has advanced to the plains, and is followed by a great area of high barometer in western Canada and the northern Pacific slope. Rain and snow are reported in the Canadian Northwest. There is a sharp drop in temperature throughout western Canada, where it was rather warm yesterday.

EIFEL TOWER NOW WIRELESS CENTER FOR ENTIRE WORLD

Structure One About to Be Torn Now
Regarded as one of Most Valuable Possessions of France.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Paris, Oct. 25.—The famous Eiffel Tower of Paris, the highest steel structure of its kind in the world, was about to be torn down several years ago on account of its uselessness. Today it is regarded as one of France's most valuable possessions. The French capital, because of the Eiffel Tower, has become the wireless center of the world.

Underneath the Champ de Mars, in which the tower stands, a vast subterranean wireless plant has been constructed. Its presence is scarcely suspected by the passer-by, for its only entrance is little more than a trap-door in the ground, partly concealed by a clump of trees. But should he attempt to approach too near the little iron staircase leading underground, he will find his way barred by soldiers.

Below ground, amid a maze of passages, gigantic machines and a continual crackling and flashing of the wireless, a corps of military engineers and electrical experts are working of the coming Parisian season.

A new and terrible engine of destruction whose function in the air will be the same as that of a torpedo at sea, has been designed by Captain Rebut, of the Military General Staff in Paris.

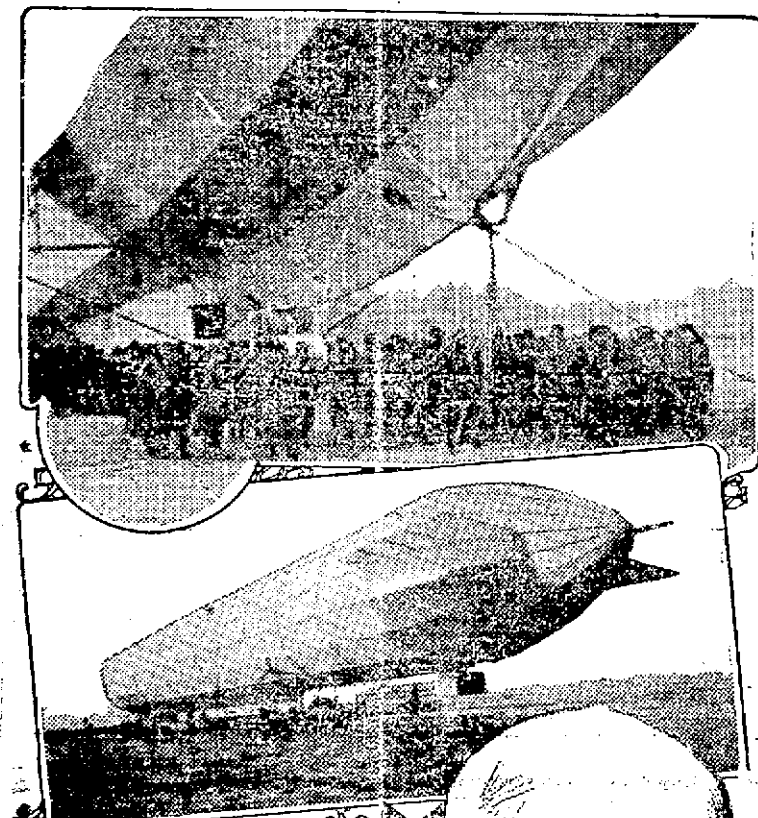

Captain Rebut's experiments with his aerial torpedo made comparatively little progress until the recent discovery of a stabilizing device for aeroplanes by the French inventor Moreau. Moreau was able, by means of his invention, to fly in a strong wind for over half an hour without touching his hands to the levers of his machine, only using his feet on the pedals for steering purposes. Captain Rebut has applied Moreau's stabilizer to his own invention and is able to foresee the time when a fleet of winged torpedoes controlled by wireless telegraphy may be launched against the enemy's air-base immediately on its appearance.

It is not impossible to believe that in the warfare of the future dirigible balloons and aeroplanes will go into the air accompanied by a fleet of protecting satellites. Under control of the airman these torpedoes will act as escort to the principal ship, and then be launched against the enemy.

Open New Tunnel.

The short but important railway tunnel through Mount d'Or, near Versailles, on the Swiss frontier was opened recently. It is 4,770 feet long and shortens the railroad route from Paris to Lausanne, by about three hours. The tunnel has been building for three years and not a workman has

ZEPPELIN DIRIGIBLES ARE NOT TO BE COUNTED ON IN WAR, GERMANY FEARS

Count Zeppelin and his dirigible.

The recent blowing up in Germany of the L-2, Count Zeppelin's latest and biggest dirigible balloon, seems to be additional proof that the count's airships are not to be counted upon in war time. Zeppelin's dirigibles have been singularly unfortunate ever since their invention. No fewer than seven of them have been destroyed by fire, explosion or wreck. Zeppelin's L-1 and L-2, Deutschland I and II and now the L-1 and L-2, the first big airships attached to the German navy, have met with disaster in this way.

day and night to perfect instruments on the accuracy of whose messages in wartime may depend France's victory or defeat, and on which also will depend the adequate co-operation of the allies. For many years the French laboratory here at Prof. Henri Abraham, of the Sorbonne, talked recently of what his work as a member of the French Wireless Mission sent by the government to Washington, D. C., Professor Abraham will not join his colleagues until late in October.

"During our work at Arlington last spring," said he, "we succeeded in co-operation with our American associates in establishing the relative time of Washington and Paris within the tenth of a second. Since then we have been able to improve greatly the receiving and recording of wireless messages. We expect now to establish the time of Washington to within the hundredth of a second, and as a part of this result the longitude of Washington as related to Paris. France will later send missions to the other principal nations with the object of establishing the relative time in the relative times. Once this work is accomplished, the world will receive time signals from the Eiffel tower and will be able to register them to within the hundredth of a second.

"This effort for accuracy to within the hundredth of a second has required a tremendous improvement in the wireless apparatus and a great advance in clock-making. Two of the most important pieces of the equipment which we shall take to America will be chronometers of such extreme precision that after being set before leaving France they are relied upon not to vary appreciably during the whole of our time in America.

"We shall use photography in registering Eiffel Tower signals for fixing the exact longitude of Washington. We arrive easily at an accuracy of a hundredth part of a second by means of a film revolving at a fixed rate of speed and a luminous spot influenced by the wireless messages, in registering the speed of radio waves I have succeeded in dividing the second into 40,000 parts. Experiences so far on the speed of wireless waves tend to show that they travel at the same speed as light, from which we make the important deduction that they are the same thing."

Rival of Tango.
A rival of the tango has found its way to Paris. It is called the "Crawling Dance." Its future is difficult to predict, for owing to the nature of the new step, a particular blouse, bonnet and gloves are prescribed. After several bars of waltzing, the two dancers release their hold and lie down gracefully at full length. Then, keeping time to the music, they slowly raise themselves to join each other and waltz again. Enthusiasts for the new dance affirm that it will be the dance been killed or injured.

Certificates for Brides.
The Swiss Society of Public Utility for Women, which has branches in all important Swiss cities and towns, has begun a campaign to require young women before marriage to be medically examined by their own and their parents' consent, so as to establish whether they are "fit subjects for marriage." The society will issue certificates to young women who they think are qualified to be brides. The endeavor will be to ultimately persuade the Cantonal legislatures to pass laws making such certificates compulsory.

HISTORIC MANSIONS DESTROYED BY FIRE

Incendiary Suffragettes Not To Blame
For All Of Losses-Waldershare Park Latest.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

London, Oct. 25.—Apart from the country houses burned in recent months by the incendiary brigade of the suffragettes, England has of late suffered some other serious losses in the destruction by fire of well known country mansions.

A number of country landmarks have gone, the latest being Waldershare Park Mansion, the country seat of Earl Guilford, situated a few miles out of Dover. In most cases defective electric wiring has been the cause of the fires, so that the loss can be put down to the demand for modern comforts in country homes.

Waldershare Park was the residence of Lord North, George III's minister, to whose obstinacy England owed the loss of the American colonies. He succeeded his father as Earl Guilford, and the present Earl is a direct descendant of his. For centuries past the occupants of country mansions like Waldershare Park have had to be satisfied with the light of candles, or in some few cases, but with the advent of electric light and the extension of the systems to the country there has been a steady demand for this modern form of lighting and with it a greater number of fires. In the case of the Earl of Guilford's residence the wiring for the electric lighting was only just being installed so that it could not be held directly responsible, although it was the indirect cause, one of the electricians leaving a light at the top of the building which during the night set fire to the woodwork.

JAPANESE BUY MANY BRITISH STEAMSHIPS

Pay High Prices For Between Forty and Fifty Second-Hand Steamers—
Conference On Safety.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

London, Oct. 25.—Japanese steamship companies have, during the present year, purchased between forty and fifty second-hand steamers from British companies, paying in every case fairly high prices for them.

This led to a report that the Japanese government was in the market for one hundred and fifty steamers to be used as transports, the rumor connecting the report with an expedition against China and to hold in reserve in case of war with America. As a matter of fact, although the steamers purchased by the Japanese companies might be used in case of necessity for transporting war material, they would be of little use for the carrying of troops. They are really freighters of a type that is no longer built by British companies, but are used in the Korean and Manchurian trade, and also in a trade that Japan is endeavoring to work up with the states on the Western coast of South America.

Shipyards are so busy at present that the Japanese found it cheaper to pay high prices for second-hand steamers than build new ones.

In view of the important part played by wireless telegraphy in the rescue at sea of over five hundred of the passengers and crew of the steamer Volturno—in response to her "SOS" signal no less than ten steamers hurried to the aid of the burning ship—ship-owners and interested attaches to an international conference to be held in London next month for the purpose of placing on an international basis the new regulations that are proposed or are already in operation for the greater safety of life and property at sea.

Fourteen nations will be represented at the conference, which was called at the initiative of the German Emperor as a result of the Titanic disaster. The German delegation will propose that all passenger steamers carrying seventy-five persons, including the crew, and freight steamers carrying crews of sixty or more, be equipped with a wireless installation capable of sending messages of a hundred sea miles. So far as the British Government is concerned, very elaborate and complete regulations have been brought into effect to provide the greater safety at sea since the Titanic disaster and some of these at least it is expected will be adopted by other countries.

Besides wireless there will come up the questions of the provision of lifeboats and the instruction crews in their use, protection against fire and the watertight subdivision of all merchant ships. The experts are looking forward to discussing the possibility of making ships unsinkable, or, possibly, of constructing a floating ship that will remain afloat at least twelve hours after meeting with serious accident.

VIENNA TELEPHONE SERVICE CRIPPLED

Government Diverting Funds To Construct Military Telephone Lines—
Many Stand Unused.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Vienna, Oct. 25.—Because of the recent war in the Balkans, it is impossible for thousands of would-be telephone subscribers in Vienna to get a telephone in their house and the reason is that the money ordinarily extended by the government on telephones in Vienna has been diverted for military purposes. The public is indignant; there is constant complaint of interruptions to the service; the breaking of connections during conversations outside noises on the line, etc., but all to no purpose. There is no money to spend on the system; nearly all the workmen have been dismissed, and the opening of three new exchanges promised for this fall has been indefinitely postponed.

For several years Vienna has suffered from what might be called a veritable telephone famine. The demand for telephones quickly exhausted the capacity of the government system. No private person could hope to get a telephone under a year or so, and when the time came to put in the apparatus nothing was ever done before an official had called to enquire if the telephone was still desired. It frequently happened that the intending subscriber had grown tired of waiting—sometimes he was dead—before the telephone was in sight. An interesting story has just come to light which explains what was done with a part of the money diverted from the ordinary telephone appropriation, and also shows the bureaucratic methods prevailing in Austria. When the mobilization was in full swing last winter Galicia was flooded with troops. The War Office linked up the postal and military communications with telephones in great haste. This was in a thinly populated country where the telephone was scarcely known. After the war was over there was no further use for these telephones for military purposes, but the poles, wires and call stations were left standing. Now the small towns and villages through which the telephone lines have passed, by allowing permission unless these communities pay the cost of construction. As they are entirely unable to do so all this costly installation, made at the expense of the taxpayers, including those in Galicia, stands idle and is left to rust and decay.

To Commercialize Ben Nevis.

Ben Nevis, Scotland's highest mountain, may be commercialized to meet the demands of tourists. A project is under way looking to the erection of a hotel on the peak, to occupy the site of the former meteorological observatory. The plans embrace a railway nearly five miles long. In an ordinary season it is estimated that fully 15,000 people climb Ben Nevis.

AMUSEMENTS

"WITHIN THE LAW."

Lovers of good plays and fine acting are certain to welcome the announcement that "Within the Law," Bayard Veiller's absorbing melodrama of modern American life, which is the current dramatic sensation in New York and Chicago, is to be given its initial local presentation on Saturday, November 1, matinee and evening, at the Myers theatre, under the managerial sponsorship of The American Play company.

Pursuing the conventional paths pursued by playwrights, Mr. Veiller has, in "Within the Law," devised a virile and exciting drama of a certain phase of contemporary life in the larger cities that appeals with equal force to every class of theatre-goer. The story is that of a young girl who is unjustly convicted and sent to prison for theft, who tries to live honestly when released, but is hounded by the police until she loses her position and who then turns on them and matches her wits against their brutality, keeping "within the law" and employing the intricacies and false standards and technicalities of the law to shield her from arrest. The develops ingenuity, daring, and makes the man who sent her to prison pay for her four years of drudgery for him and her three years in a felon's cell, almost breaking his heart through his guilt and honor.

For "Within the Law" the American Play company have engaged an adequate cast of individual and collective excellence while the extensive scenic investigation required for the moving of the play on a scale of lavishness not usually attempted in the line of dramatic productions.

Appears at Myers Tonight.

Miss Mary Mooney, who is appearing as Flah in "The Tik Tok Man of Oz," at the Myers theatre tonight, comes from one of the most prominent Eastern families interested in sociology. Prior to her theatrical engagement, Miss Mooney was one of the aids to the United States Commissioner John J. Murphy of New York City. She has been associated with settlement work for more than five years and was known by East Side children as the "Lady Bountiful." Last summer she was in charge of the Bronx playgrounds, and a favorite with the girls because she introduced arts and crafts in her summer school, a course heretofore taught only in high schools.

In an address before the Progressive Playground association of New York, N. J., Miss Mooney said: "If the city of New York will expend money to build playgrounds, it will solve the tenement question. For children are made to believe and realize the importance of their health, just as soon will their parents move to other quarters. The playground is the link between the progressive world and the child of the tenement."

The prospect of a visit here next winter by William Hodge in "The Road to Happiness" is said to be very vague. It is understood that at the time of his Chicago engagement Mr. Hodge will go direct to Boston.

"The Tik Tok Man of Oz" at the Myers theatre tonight, is one of the biggest musical comedy productions of the season. A special train of nine cars is required to move the company of ninety persons and the elaborate stage settings and properties. The company played at the Grand at Rockford last night where best seats sold for $2.

FACE BROKE OUT IN LITTLE PIMPLES

Red and Sore. Like Little Boils. Would Wake Up At Night and Scratch. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured in Three Weeks.

Falls City, Neb.—"My trouble began when I was about sixteen. My face broke out in little pimples at first. They were red and sore and then became like little boils. I picked at my face continually and it made my face red and sore looking and then I would wake up at night and scratch it. It was a source of constant annoyance to me, as my face was always red and spotted and burned all the time.

"I tried _____ and others, but I could find nothing to cure it. I had been troubled about two years before I found Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I sent for a sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and tried them and I then bought some. I washed my face good with the Cuticura Soap and hot water at night and then applied the Cuticura Ointment. In the morning I washed it off with the Cuticura Soap and hot water. In two days I noticed a decided improvement, while in three weeks the cure was complete." (Signed) Judd Knowles, Jan. 10, 1913.

We come, we come, O sad-eyed wrecks, we're coming with a will! We're all in debt up to our necks, and going deeper still. We're buying things we can't afford, and mock the old time way of sitting down a little hoard against the rainy day! No more about the poor man roams; in gorgeous car he scoots; we're mortgaged upon our homes, our furniture, our boots. We've banished all the ancient cares, we paint the country red, we live like drunken millionaires, and never look ahead. The paupers, on the porch, are waiting in a group; they know we'll all be there anon, to share their cabbage soup, they see us in our costly garb, and say: "Their course is brief; we see the harbingers that harp of bankrupt and grief." Be patient, paupers, for a span, ye friendless men and dames! We're coming, blithely as we can, to join you in your games!

SideLights On The Circus Business

By
D. W. WATT

(Copyrighted.)

In my early days in the show business with the Burr Robbins circus at the close of the season I would always go back in the clothing store of J. S. Smith and Son and work there during the winter. It was located where the Zeigler Company is now and at that time was one of the largest clothing stores in the state outside of Milwaukee.

A few years later when I was with the Adam Forepaugh Show I wrote my old employer and invited him to come to Chicago and be my guest for at least a day or two. We were to meet there on the ground now occupied by the Fine Arts Building. On the first day of our opening, which was Monday morning, about nine o'clock, Dr. S. S. Judd drove up in the ticket wagon with the finest pair of carriage horses I think that ever left Janesville and as he knew Adam Forepaugh was an admirer of fine horses, he wanted to give him a ride down Michigan avenue. They were returned Adam Forepaugh said, "Dave, I think there is the finest pair of horses that I ever sat behind."

Only a few days later Dr. Judd sold them for something like $2,000. He had only been gone a few minutes when J. M. Hanchett, who at that time was keeping a high class livery stable on 12th street, between State and Washburn avenue, drove up with a pair nearly as fine as the ones Dr. Judd's and Mr. Forepaugh had to go for another ride down the avenue.

J. M. or Mark Hanchett, as he was familiarly known, was formerly a Janesville resident, but for many years was considered the highest class dealer in fine carriage and saddle horses in Chicago and numbered among his many customers such men as Palmer, Marshall, Fiske, Levi Z. Leiter and J. V. Farwell. These men would simply say to Mr. Hanchett, "I am in need of another carriage team," and the rest of it was left to the good judgment of Mark Hanchett.

Mr. Forepaugh and Mr. Hanchett returned in about an hour and just as Mr. Forepaugh stepped out of the carriage Mr. C. Smith walked once to the show grounds and with another friend to introduce to Mr. Forepaugh. As I had to spend all my time in the ticket wagon Mr. Forepaugh took charge of Mr. Smith and took him through the show from the front door to the dressing room, in which he introduced to many of the principal performers and Mr. Smith put in his entire day as my guest at the show and when he bade me goodbye that evening he said "Dave, this has been one of the most delightful days of my life. I have seen more today and know more about the business than I had ever anticipated."

That evening when Adam Forepaugh was back up the days' work he said to me, "Dave, you have certainly introduced me to three high class friends. Have you any more of that kind in Janesville?"

I said, "Yes, governor, we have got plenty of that kind," and with a smile on his face he looked over his classes and said, "No, I don't think you can find three men like that in the state." And I think this was true.

While they were all nearly three score years and ten, with many years up behind them, there were many of those years that did not count for them were all three members of the Sunshine Club and lived that way all their lives. They had all traveled the country over, had brushed up against people in a business or a social way and they were much younger than many men of half their age.

It was this same season that along late in the fall we went south for a few weeks before closing the show and that in those days was the country where you could see interesting sights and interesting people. Almost any time after midnight many of the old colored people and hundreds of little black pickaninnies would gather at the railroad station where they would have their horses to keep warm and wait the coming of the great show. And while there were many of these people who did not have the price to go to the show, they were around the canvas all day looking at the side show and listening to the music and after the show had gone all those colored people had been to the show just the same and had many interesting stories to tell their friends about what they saw with the big circus.

This is about the time of year that the shows are heading toward their winter quarters and a few of them at least have already closed the season. Gollmar Brothers closed week before last and are already in their winter quarters at Denver, Colo. The Ringlings will close on November 1st, down in Texas and ship from there direct to Haraboo. Already some of the larger shows that are now on the road and have new projects are under way for the Panama Pacific Exposition and Lorenz Hagenbeck of Germany was in Cincinnati a few days ago, making life headquarters at the Zoological Gardens where Sol. Stettin, Hagenbeck's American representative, is superintendent. It is said that one of the purposes of his trip is to lay the foundation for an animal show to be put on at the Panama Pacific Exposition, which will be one of the most wonderful exhibitions of his kind ever staged.

A large booking has begun in connection with the Big Circus which Charles B. Cochran is to run at Chicago from next Christmas on, and in conjunction with the Karl Hagenbeck's Wonder Zoo. Would-be purchasers of seats need not be alarmed for there are still a fair number of seats awaiting their attention. Skittles, the circus to be forty daily furnished boxes, holding from six to ten persons, and it is the best of these which has just been secured for the entire run of the show by a contracting agency.

position in the world of high finance and a constant attendant at first nights. There he proposes to entertain his numerous grandchildren and their little friends in detachments from day to day. I want to tell you something about my first visit to New York City which was made in connection with the Adam Forepaugh Show. I arrived at the New Central Depot at 42d street and at that time there was but one large building anywhere near the depot and this was the Grand Central Hotel. From there I took a horse car down town and we had driven several blocks and I saw the main part of the city before we passed any buildings of note. But today some of the finest theatres in New York City are built miles and miles beyond this point, and this season a man by the name of Loew has just finished one of the finest theatres in New York City, which opened as a vaudeville house October 18th. Mr. Loew has made millions in the business and he is only the last of a long line of men who have made millions of dollars in the city. The amount of business that these houses do that make it possible for them to be paying investments for them to be a world of money to build.

This new Loew's cost $300,000 is located on Third avenue between 38th and 37th streets and is now as Loew's Orpheum. It is the handsomest and most beautiful of all his theatres and has been in operation since the beginning of the year. The interior decorations are unusually striking. The theatre has but one balcony, which will seat 1,500—the largest theatre balcony in New York. It extends over half way out over the orchestra seats and is suspended by the latest invention without supporting posts to interfere with the vision. There are four landings to get to the top of the balcony, with a mezzanine floor and rest room on each. The theatre has two ladies' smoking rooms and two gentlemen's smoking rooms.

The new playhouse brings the number of theatres owned by Loew in Greater New York to over a score and indicates a remarkable expansion in the sight-seers he has been in theatricals in this city. This last theatre is his crowning triumph.

The theatre will be devoted to the usual brand of Loew vaudeville and in spite of the fact that the cost of the prices will be enormous, the other houses. Seats all over the house at matinees will be ten cents, and at night ten, fifteen and twenty-five cents.

Unfreezable. "Can any one name a liquid that doesn't freeze?" asked the teacher. There was a moment's silence, says the Berliner Illustrirte Zeitung. Then a voice in the rear of the room answered, eagerly, "Please, teacher, hot water!"

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.) Albion, Oct. 23.—Josephine Burdick Langworthy was born in South Brooklyn, New York, April 10, 1824, and died October 16, 1913. In the year 1842 her father, Aldin Burdick, came to Wisconsin and settled on a tract of land one and one-half miles south of Albion. She was one of the first district school teachers of the county. Her first school was at the Gravel store, where Tauton's blacksmith shop now stands. She married Jacob Langworthy from Brooklyn, New York, April 2, 1851. She left but one daughter, Mrs. D. L. Concerning Dr. Goddard

The above is a picture of Wisconsin's leading specialist who treats Chronic Diseases, without resorting to Surgery or the knife.

For many years past, in certain troubles such as Rupture, Chronic Appendicitis, Gout, Stomach, and many diseases peculiar to Women it was thought necessary to resort to Surgery.

But in the past few years such brilliant men in the profession as Dr. Mackintosh of Paris, the leading physician of the world today, Dr. Ewen, Professor of Medicine at the University of Edinburgh, Scotland, Sir Henry Burdett of England, and Dr. Page of Boston, Mass., not to mention many others of great prominence, have become firmly convinced and have proven that many of these cases can be more successfully, better and more safely cured by modern treatment than by the knife.

And it is along these same advanced lines that Dr. Goddard has had his remarkable success in treating Chronic Diseases without operation.

The Doctor comes to Janesville once every four weeks and freely grants consultation to all who may call on him at the Myers Hotel.

He comes to us highly recommended, and has had many of our people as his patients, whom he has cured after they had tried many other physicians without relief. In talking with the writer recently the Doctor said: "The tendency among the medical profession in the past has been to put the knife into everybody on the slightest pretext, but with the great advancements that have been made in the Science of Medicine in the last few years, many of the broad minded surgeons have seen the errors of their ways, with the result that they are not resorting to Surgical operations in one-quarter the cases that they formerly did. I can truthfully say, and can prove it that 80% of the so called cases of Chronic Appendicitis that have been submitted to operations in the past could have been cured much better by our modern methods of treatment, thus saving the patient all the suffering and danger, not to mention the expense that accompanies surgical operations. I have proven the truth of it in my community and I should like to show you scores of letters, from grateful patients, whom I cured to prove it to you also."

The Doctor has lately written a little book that is intensely interesting entitled, "Modern Methods of Treating Chronic Diseases without Surgical Operation," which he will gladly send to anyone absolutely free of charge on request.

Anyone suffering from any Chronic condition, especially if it has failed to respond to the ordinary treatment should certainly avail themselves of the opportunity to consult Dr. Goddard on his next visit to Janesville, on Nov. 4th, at the Myers Hotel, hours: 9:30 a. m. to 4 p. m., or write to him at his permanent address, 121 Wisconsin St., Milwaukee, Wis. Send for his little book anyway. It will greatly interest you. Advertisement

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

"SO I WENT back to my work thinking how many fine people there are in this world—if you scratch 'em deep enough."

There is a certain species of self-satisfaction in which a great many of us indulge with no apparent consciousness of our vanity, and with a surprising lack of reticence. I refer to the very common habit of aspersing others of deeds and motives of which we think we ourselves would be entirely incapable.

You know the old Quaker saying, "All the world is queer except me and thee, and sometimes I think there is a little queer." Doubtless you have laughed at that. And yet, have you never by your readiness to believe evil of anyone, even of your friend, showed that you had just about that opinion of the morals of the rest of the world, if not of its intellect?

Would you be capable of slandering your good friend behind his back? Indeed, no. Very well, then, do you not see that you are flattering yourself on being far better than he when you are so ready to believe that he has been saying slanderous things about you?

Would you be capable of stealing, even if you had the greatest opportunity and temptation? Certainly not. Very well, then, do you not see that you are flattering yourself on being far better than the rest of the world when you are so quick to suspect that the chambermaid stole that gold pin which you cannot find?

To be sure she is a chambermaid and you are a woman of means, but let me tell you that dishonesty is not a matter of class or circumstances. I don't doubt that there is just as large a percentage of dishonesty among wealthy wives as among poor chambermaids. No, of course, the wife's dishonesty does not take the form of stealing a gold pin, because there is no temptation.

There for her, but it certainly does just as much harm when it takes the form of stealing her neighbor's reputation, or the love of her neighbor's husband. Therefore, if you are a woman of means and know that you would not do things like this, you have no right to suspect the chambermaid of the dishonesties of her class.

Truly it is not unlikely that other folks are just as good as you and I. A friend of mine once said, "I have seldom been suspicious of my neighbor without having regretted my suspicions." I don't doubt that this is the experience of anyone who has enough fineness to be troubled by such regrets. All of us at one time or another have found our suspicions unjust, and if we were worth anything at all, we should be first ashamed and humble and then glad to find, as David Grayson puts it, "how many fine people there are in the world—if you scratch 'em deep enough."

HEART and HOME PROBLEMS

MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Had a dear boy friend who at one time was very attentive to me, but is now traveling and wants me for a correspondent. I have written him for four years, but he happened to be home last week for three days and didn't call as much as call me over the phone. I heard from him immediately after his departure and he stated that he had been home, but his time was so limited that he intended coming back in a few months, etc.

Do you think it advisable to write him or simply cease our corresponding altogether? I am at a loss what to do. My intentions were to cease our corresponding, but sister thought it proper for me to write him a brief note and tell him "if his time was so limited that he couldn't call me over the phone that my time was so limited that it was impossible for me to find a few leisure moments to write him." This isn't his first offense but other times he found time to call me.

I would like to say that sister is right, my dear, but probably it would be in better taste not to answer his letter. If he insists upon your writing to him, you might use sister's words in your reply. I am afraid the boy thinks you are too forgiving.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have known a young man of nineteen for about four years. Two or three years ago he told me he loved me. He told me that nothing was too good for me and that he would never marry any other girl. He said that I would have to wait till he earned more money than he would marry. He never did call on me often, but when I went the evening with his sisters he always went home with me (and he does now). He used to tell me to forget him, as his family is poor and he is not a very good student. Sometimes as though he cared for me and other times he just sneaks and hardly looks at me. He has not mentioned love for about

IDEAS FOR HALLOWE'EEN.

The last of October is the season when we revel in the beautiful autumn fruits and vegetables. Pumpkins and gourds lend themselves so well to decoration, the rich red of the apple, the blue and purple of the grape and the brown of the chestnut gives a richness of color not found any other time of year.

The chestnut is the nut par excellence for this season, and its delicacy of flavor makes it always a delight.

Chestnut Entree.—Mash a pound of roasted chestnuts to a paste, season well, add two well beaten eggs and a teaspoon of chopped parsley. Pour into buttered timbale cups and set in a pan of hot water. Bake twenty-five minutes and serve with a cream of rich tomato sauce.

Delicious soups may be made of chestnuts. Cook a quart of the meats in boiling water until the skins will come off. Remove them and drop again into boiling water, add a small onion and a stalk of celery, a blade of mace and a bay leaf. When the nuts are tender, mash through a sieve, return to the fire with two quarts of white stock, a teaspoonful of salt, a few dashes of paprika and a pint of hot milk. When the milk boils, remove from the stove and add two beaten yolks and a half cup of cream. Serve in bouillon cups.

For an evening entertainment, nuts, apples, popcorn and sweet cider are the refreshments most appropriate. If one wants something more substantial, hot coffee and doughnuts are great favorites.

Chestnut Bavarian Cream.—Soften half a package of gelatin in a half cup of cold water. Press a cup of preserved chestnuts through a sieve. To this puree and the gelatin add a fourth of a cup of sugar and two tablespoons of vanilla. Set the dish in ice water and stir constantly until the mixture begins to thicken, then fold in a cup of whipped cream and one cup of thin cream. Continue to fold the two mixtures together until the mass will hold its shape, then put into small molds, decorated with glaze or maraschino cherries, cut in bits. Dip the molds in hot water when ready to serve, and they will uncoil smoothly.

MAKING THE SUNDAY EVENING MEAL PLEASANTLY

In many homes the Sunday evening meal is made pleasantly informal both by the simplicity of the food and the manner of serving it. If a simple matter to set the table as for luncheon with centerpiece and doilies. If one hot dish is to be served the chafin dish is often used and many times the host is an expert in chafin dish cookery. Or, if there are children (either sons or daughters) old enough to take charge of a meal, let them assume the responsibility of the Sunday night supper, taking turns if they choose and try inviting mother to a meal once a week. I am sure no one will appreciate it more.

In a cooking class I once had among others a brother and sister, nine and twelve years old, respectively, who loved to cook and begged to do some of it at home. But the cook said, "None of their fussing in my kitchen." But the father said, "No cooks or maids can enter our kitchen Sunday morning and my two children may plan and cook our Sunday morning breakfast."

They did for some time at least, and I had many happy evenings from them, as we always helped plan the breakfast with them and used such dishes as came within their experience in the cooking class.

No meal during the week can so characterize the intimate family life or hospitality to friends as this Sunday evening meal. "Fire-side suppers" are fine if families are still in the country during the cool weather. A tea wagon or English tea stand holding sandwiches, cakes, buns, and plates, trays, etc., is easily moved to the fireplace, and there is no end to the good cheer in eating under such happy conditions.

Who would care for Sunday or Monday, or any day for that matter, unless we had unexpected company? "Drop in" occasionally. The only discomfort which ever should be felt by the hostess is when she is not prepared with enough in her larder to serve these extra guests for luncheon or supper.

If meals are planned in advance, do not make any changes for the unexpected guests. There is nothing which adds more to the discomfort than this "extra work" idea of hospitality. To have the guests most comfortable and perfectly welcome, all that is necessary is to put on an extra plate and add a little more in quantity if ample time is given for it. It is not then the emergency which should always contain reserve food such as canned soups, vegetables, noodles, waters of several kinds.

Inspiration in Regret.

The life without regret is the life without gain. Regret is but the light of fuller wisdom from our past, illuminating our future. It means that we are wiser today than we were yesterday. This new wisdom means responsibility, new privileges; it is a new chance for a better life. But if regret remain merely "regret," it is useless; it must become the revelation of new possibilities, and the inspiration and source of strength to realize them, each other; as love increases prudence.—William C. Jordan.

The World's Greatest Beauties HAVE HAD BEAUTIFUL HAIR

In all affairs of weight, whether of war, politics or business, beautiful women have always exerted a mighty influence. This subservience of the world to feminine loveliness is seldom admitted by the sterner sex, but it is there just the same and no one realizes this better than man, mere man. He is a daily worshipper at the shrine of Venus and a passively willing prisoner to her charms. This condition has existed since the world began, until, to the lord of creation, paying regular and magnificent tribute to beauty has become a habit. In the early days, to enhance the pristine beauty of their hair, the women resorted to the use of fragrant ointments. Such care was given to the hair, hours being devoted daily to the manipulation of the lady's tresses by her slaves and hand maids. Today the girl or woman, desiring to appear always at her best and to have healthy luxuriant hair, relies on

They must walk and bend and work with racking pains and many aches from kidney ills. Keeping the kidneys well has spared thousands of women much misery. Mrs. George Hammes, 1208 Ravine St., Janesville, Wis., says: "Just about a year ago I began to notice that my kidneys were getting in bad shape. The first symptoms were severe backaches and pains across my hips. Then I had headaches and dizzy spells. I was nervous and felt miserable. I knew that my kidneys were causing this trouble so I used Doan's Kidney Pills. It took only a few boxes to cure me. HOLTON of THE NAVY

A Story of the Freeing of Cuba

Holton sat back in his seat. So war had come. What would happen now? So far as he was concerned, Holton was likely to be well in the forefront. He was excited, thrilled in every fiber of his being. He put the dispatch in his pocket and walked back through the train to his car. As he reached Miss La Tossa's section he found her folding up a bit of paper and putting it in her waist.

Had she, too, received a dispatch? Holton did not doubt it. So he wasted no words.

"Well, it has come to pass," he said; "war has been declared, and within a few months Cuba will be as free as even you could wish."

"God grant it," she murmured. Holton held out his hand.

"Good night, Miss La Tossa," he said. She shook his hand cordially, lingeringly even.

"Good night," she replied. Her eyes sought his, and for a moment it seemed as though she were going to speak. Then she turned away.

Holton waited an instant, and then he, too, averted his face.

"Good night," he said again, and went to his own berth, where the porter had completed his preparations.

CHAPTER V.

Mysterious Messages.

At Tampa Holton met and had breakfast with several army engineers who had been engaged in laying out camp sites in the pine woods back of Tampa. Then in the afternoon he proceeded on to Port Tampa, nine miles away. Ahead, rising into the blue sky like some dream palace in Sahara, the Tampa Bay Hotel, with its brick walls and gleaming silver domes and minarets.

It brought hope to his heart, and his steps were more springy as he hurried toward the immense structure. A negro boy took his bag as he entered the lobby, and the clerk smiled as he had not done since the winter through left the hostelry early in March.

After a bath and shave he set out to the bay to view his new command. He found her in charge of an able seaman, Conroy, who welcomed him with enthusiasm.

Holton stepped aboard and chuckled when he recalled the comparatively large deck space of the Scorpion. The Gnat was almost a toy craft, and yet her regulation torpedo gun on the after deck, the machine gun forward, and the little conning tower, heavily plated with steel, gave adequate hint that she was by no means built for pleasure.

"It is likely we'll be busy before long, Conroy," he said. "I'll have my luggage brought down from the hotel and come aboard at once. How many men have we?"

"Only Howard, the engineer, and me," was the reply.

"All right. The fewer the better. I'll return shortly, and perhaps take her out."

Whereupon Holton stepped out with a blithe stride. In the lobby of the hotel he buried his face in a Washington newspaper and spent a half-hour absorbing the war talk of the day.

His reverie was interrupted by a hotel page, who handed him a card bearing the name Jose Rodriguez, Havana.

"Mr. Rodriguez wishes to know if you will do him the honor of calling upon him in his rooms," announced the boy.

"Rodriguez! And who is he?"

"He's a very wealthy Spaniard who has been here some time."

"Well, then, you will tell Mr. Rodriguez that if he wishes to see me, he'll find me here."

"Yes, sir, I'll tell him that," and the boy hurried away.

"I like the nerve of that," growled Holton, returning to his paper.

In a few moments the page stood before him again.

"Well?" Holton looked up, imtiently. "Mr. Rodriguez said, sir, that he does not wish to speak to you in the lobby, and that it will be best for you if you visit him as soon as you can in his rooms."

Holton flushed angrily. "Say, boy, get this straight. You give Mr. Rodriguez Mr. Holton's compliments, and say to Mr. Rodriguez that Mr. Holton says for him to go to the devil."

The page fled, and Holton, with a short laugh, strolled over to the clerk's desk.

"Who is this man Rodriguez to guests of the hotel?" he inquired.

"A curious duffer," was the reply. "Rich as get out, and very exclusive. He very seldom comes out of his room. Did he send for you?"

"Yes, he did me the honor. By the way, I wish you'd have my junk taken from my room and put aboard the Gnat; will you?"

"Certainly, sir." Having given the order, Holton paid his bill, and was about to go down to his boat when a negro tapped him on the arm.

Holton turned suddenly, his nose almost colliding with a note which the man held out almost at arm's length.

"This for me?" he asked. "Ya-as, sub."

Holton took it, broke open the envelope, and glanced hastily over the contents. Then, with a frown, he turned to a boy.

A Negro Tapped Him on the Arm.

"Say, youngster," he commanded, "take me right up to Mr. Rodriguez's room, will you?"

On reaching the third floor, the boy led the way down the hall, stopping before a door at the end of the corridor.

"Here it is, sir."

"All right," Holton gave the lad a coin and rattled his knuckles against the panel.

The door was opened by an intelligent-looking Cuban, who conducted the caller into a luxuriously furnished reception-room and asked him to sit down. Soon a door opened and a tall, sallow man, handsome in a languid Latin way, confronted him.

"Ah, Senor Holton. You honor me," he murmured.

"Then you are Mr. Rodriguez?" asked Holton abruptly.

"Yes, yes," responded the man, who was clad in a well-made suit of crash with a crimson sash about his waist. "I repeat, I am flattered at your visit."

"I am glad of that," Holton rejoined stily; "but I come in response to a note stating that matters of interest to a Miss La Tossa were pressing. Will you do me the kindness to enlighten me as to the manner in which my acquaintance with Miss La Tossa interests you?"

The Spaniard bowed. "You are direct, like all Americans," he said. "Well, be it so."

He took from a table a bottle of very rare Abuelo Oloroso, and poured a little in a glass. He pushed it toward Holton.

"I drink," he said, smilingly brilliantly, "to Miss La Tossa, and may she have a most comfortable trip on the Gnat."

"What on earth are you talking about?" he cried.

"Miss La Tossa, as you know," the Spaniard said, "is in Tampa."

"Yes, I know that," said Holton. "She came down on my train."

"It is not good for her to be here."

"The climate?" queried Holton, disingenuously.

"No, not the climate," was the reply, so sharp and so spirited, so much in contrast to Rodriguez's previous manner of speech that the naval officer started. "Not the climate. She is engaged in activities here that your government regards as most pernicious."

"Yes, and your own government?" came back Holton.

"My government," Rodriguez smiled genially, "happens to be your government."

So saying, he handed Holton a paper which, as the officer read it, convinced him beyond question or cavil that Senor Rodriguez was none other than an attaché of the United States State Department, whose name was anathema to every Spaniard or loyal Cuban.

He was, in sooth, none other than Ramon del Rey, a spy, with headquarters in Washington, who, although a naturalized American, had done more effective, if unobtrusive, work for Cuba Libre than most other Cuban patriots rolled into one.

Holton rose and, with a smile of genuine pleasure, thrust out his hand. "I have heard of you," he said; "and I'm glad to know you."

"Thank you, I, too, have heard of you. But to business. Miss La Tossa must not stay here, and yet her removal must be brought about quietly, for various reasons. It is best that Miss La Tossa be transported at once to Cuba on the Gnat, very quietly and unostentatiously, where agents of mine will meet her and conduct her to her estate in the province of Santiago. Once there, I promise you she'll not leave in a hurry. Your orders will come to you from Washington within a very few hours. In the meantime I suggest you have everything ready."

"I see—and Miss La Tossa?"

"Miss La Tossa will be escorted aboard the Gnat at seven o'clock precisely, and now I bid you good day and thank you."

"Thank you," and Holton left, wondering if the man realized all he was thanking him for.

He lost no time in making his way to the Gnat, where he astonished Conroy and Howard by summoning them to the cabin.

"Is there any way," he said, "in which this room can be made more comfortable for a young lady?"

Neither of the two men spoke, regarding Holton with open-mouthed astonishment.

"It's this way," smiled Holton, "the Gnat's been ordered to take a young Cuban woman over to Cuba, and—and I want her to be comfortable."

The faces of the two men radiated curiosity, but Holton said nothing further to enlighten them.

Promptly at seven o'clock that evening a closed carriage drove rapidly down the long wharf and stopped abreast the gangway leading to the Gnat. The door was flung open, and del Rey and an American, their arms linked through those of Miss La Tossa, descended and without a word walked down the plank and aboard the torpedo boat.

Holton met them by the conning tower and lifted his cap.

"How do you do, Miss La Tossa?" he said, smiling in greeting.

She flashed a vague look at him, and lowered her eyes without speaking.

Del Rey bowed in a courtly manner to the girl. "I trust you will have a pleasant voyage, and I beg to apologize for my seeming rudeness."

The captive declined no reply, and turned her back as the two men retraced their steps up the gangway.

A few minutes later the diminutive warship was churning her way out through the bay.

Holton turned to the girl, who stood disconsolately, viewing the receding shore.

"I am sorry, Miss La Tossa, but you will recognize, of course, that I am doing nothing but obeying orders, which are to see that you are very comfortable and agreeably entertained until you reach Cuba."

She evidently had determined not to talk to her captor, but changed her mind with womanlike suddenness.

"I shall thank you if I am comfortable, but I shall thank you still more if you give over any idea of entertaining me. You may be sure that the less I see of you the better I shall be pleased."

"If you will follow me, Miss La Tossa," he said, with sudden stiffening of manner, "I'll show you your cabin."

The dark came rolling across the sea. It was a wonderful night, a night spangled with constellations and undulating black velvet waters, which picked up the little torpedo craft, holding her high and then sending her gliding silently down long inclines, at the bottom of which she seemed, to nestle a moment before her screw kicked her up another quivering hill.

Some time later the lights of a craft which had been following astern of the Gnat began to creep closer and closer aboard, and dark clouds of smoke, billowing from three squat funnels, blotting out the northeastern horizon.

Holton saw the vessel, too, and easily recognized her as a torpedo boat destroyer. His only doubt was as to her nationality.

This was speedily settled, for suddenly Ardols lights began to blink from the bridge, interpreting which Holton learned that the destroyer Bainbridge wished to speak to the Gnat.

In a few minutes the Bainbridge swished up and the sharp voice of Lieutenant-Commander Jameson sounded from the bridge.

"On board the Gnat?"

"Aye, aye!" yelled Holton. There followed a silence which lasted until the destroyer alid her high, sharp bow and conical forward deck alongside the little torpedo boat. Jameson jumped aboard and after turning Holton's salute he said formally:

"I have orders to take a Miss La Tossa from the Gnat and land her at—well, never mind where."

"Very good, sir. Any orders for me?"

"Yes, here they are." Jameson took an envelope from his overcoat-pocket and handed it to Holton. "Now, then, I'll take the girl."

But the girl, in fact, did not wait to be taken. She stepped forward most gracefully, and addressing Jameson, said:

They turned away and said in a very conciliatory tone of voice: "Let us not quarrel over the matter any more. I, at least, have not the heart to do it. I never knew who my mother was; she deserted me when a baby, and who knows but that you may have been the heartless parent?"

"Ah, yes," murmured Miss Screecher after the first selection at the musical. "I have had some exciting experiences. Coming over here from Europe, a terrible storm arose, and I had to sing to quiet the passengers. You should have seen the heavy seas running."

And the big, rude man in the pink necktie gazed out of the window. "I don't blame the sea," he muttered.

"Mother," said an exasperated young lady, "I wish you would not hang that old parrot up in the parlor."

"Why not, my dear?" asked her mother.

"Why, I think he must have belonged to a car conductor before you bought him. Every two or three minutes, when Edwin is here, he chirps out, 'Sit closer, please.' It is too embarrassing for anything."

Vincent, the Little Son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward R. Mac Lean, Said To Be the Richest Boy in America Revelling in the First Joys of Farm Life.

WHEN Miss Evelyn Walsh, the only daughter of U. S. Senator Walsh, married Edward R. Mac Lean, only son of John R. Mac Lean, a multi-millionaire of Cincinnati and Washington, two of the most colossal fortunes in this country were merged. The issue of this union is Vincent Mac Lean, a chubby boy of four years who, naturally, was at once dubbed the "Billionaire Baby." Vincent bears up under the burden of this awe-inspiring title with surprising fortitude, and it must be said in his favor there is little in the department of the richest youngster in the United States to designate him from other boys of his age and social station. He is an everyday, rough and tumble, rollicking happy little chap who goes about the even tenor of his way without a thought of the grave responsibilities that are in store for him.

Just at present Vincent is revelling in the joys of farm life, for with his parents he went early in the spring to the magnificent Black Point estate which his parents leased and which they will occupy until late autumn.

Bill Enters Vincent's Life.

From the start the Mac Leans determined that Vincent should be reared with all the tender care that one of his importance demands, but at the same time both made up their minds that a pampered boy with visions of untold wealth eternally held before him would sooner or later develop into a wayward youth, or else into an insufferable snob. So to avoid risk of either of these contingencies they decided that they would have back to plans so often adopted by Southern born men and women for the rearing of their children. All of us who were either born in the South or lived there, know that the majority of children, from earliest infancy, have for their caretakers or playmates a little negro boy or girl, usually the children of an old family servant—a servant of the old school, of course. The devotion of these little picaninies to their little wards is little short of idolatry. They would willingly lay down their lives for their little charges, and this devotion is repaid by the tender regard which the little master or mistress has for his black playmate.

Mrs. Mac Lean found just such a little picaninny. His mother was an old-fashioned negro who had been reared by "White Folks" and her associations were such that her little son must necessarily be free from that viciousness so often found among the blacks where their children have been allowed to run wild and grow up in the slums of the big cities. This little boy was adopted by the Mac Leans and he was placed in charge of Vincent. In fact he is Vincent's very own and from the first moment the two gazed upon each other their hearts were stirred and Vincent and Black Bill, from that day to this, became inseparable and devoted companions.

Of course the little black boy accompanied Vincent to the farm. There a startling surprise awaited each. Mr. Mac Lean had seemingly scoured the country for pets with which to amuse his little son. He wanted him to take to country life, and every animal one would find on a well regulated farm was at Black Point, but the majority of them in miniature form. Vincent's shaggy lithe Shetland pony is one of the shaggy, even tinier that money could buy, and he went into ecstasies over his new pet the moment he saw it. The pony was saddled and bridled and Vincent, carefully supported by Bill, started forth on his first ride. Later the saddle was removed and the pony was harnessed to a little cart which was exclusively made for Vincent and Bill. Vincent drove for the first time in his young life and the thrills of that ride are still among the most pleasurable of the many he experienced at the farm.

Vincent Gets a Goat.

Long before the novelty of the pony had worn off Vincent awoke one morning to find awaiting him a rare specimen of goat correctly harnessed to a little cart with Bill standing at his head ready for his little master to take his seat, pick up the reins and sail forth for a before-breakfast ride over the smooth roads of the Mac Lean estate. From that moment Vincent was rent by conflicting emotions. He couldn't decide which was the deader to him—pony or goat—so to be sure that neither was slighted he decided to divide play time equally between the two. In a way the goat has the better of the bargain and can steal a march on the pony in the race for their little master's affections. When the pony is unharnessed he is either stabled or turned loose in paddock or pasture. But the goat has the run of the place, and so attached has it become to Vincent that it follows him about like a dog and incidentally lords it over the pack of dogs that are always romping and rollicking at the heels of the Billionaire Baby. Only the house is barred to the goat, but every once in a while it runs the gauntlet, slips through the guard of footmen and maids and clatters through the house bleating lustily for Vincent and Bill.

Vincent, early in his stay at the farm, evinced a lively interest in poultry. This became so pronounced that Mr. Mac Lean had a chicken house and run constructed which was to be Vincent's very own. This was stocked with rarest fowl, and the poultry of the farm was ordered to instruct Vincent along correct and sane lines in the care and keep of his chickens. The boy was told that if he was to have chickens he must learn to take care of them, feed them and gather the eggs each day. The hours Vincent and Bill spend in the chicken yard are by no means the least interesting these two while away in the course of the day. Each of the boy's pullets and roosters is named and each answers to its name when Vincent arrives at the run. If he is in a far distant part of the grounds and hears the cackle of a hen he knows at once which of his pets has laid an egg and he goes scampering to the hen house to take it proudly to the house.

A True Sportsman.

That Vincent is a true son of his father, inheriting many of the sporting proclivities of the elder Mac Lean, is attested by his fondness for game chickens. There are a number of game roosters that strut about the stable yard and Vincent loves nothing better than to see two of these gladiators square off for a battle to the finish, and the boy stands by until the final flutter of victor or vanquished to see that fair play ruled throughout. Every once in awhile his bulldogs mix it up and Vincent is not in the least afraid to step into the thick of the fray to separate the combatants should he see that the weaker of the two is getting the worst of the conflict. This love of sport is further evidenced by the races arranged by Bill and himself, Vincent on the pony and Bill in the goat cart or vice versa, complete the entrants for some of the stirring finishes that are seen about the farm.

Mother Looks to Future.

In discussing her boy, recently, Mrs. Mac Lean said: "Much has been said and written about Vincent, much of it true and a great deal of it purely fictional. We have but one hope in view, and that to make the boy strong, healthy, clean and wholesome. We want him to be just like any other sturdy, American boy. It matters not whether he will have a fortune when he comes of age or not, for when he reaches man's estate he will have been so trained—if our plans do not miscarry—that he will be perfectly able to start out in life and earn a living, if necessary. Just what his future will be rests with him. Whatever channel his talents lie in those talents will be cultivated and given full scope. Above all things he must be normal. He is not spoiled a bit and we intend to see that he is kept so. We are no different from other parents, I suppose, in that we have fond dreams for the boy's future. We may be more fortunate than some inasmuch as the very best instructors that money can procure will be engaged for the boy's training through the various stages of boyhood. He shall select his own college when he is old enough to take an interest in such things and by that time we believe he will have evinced a lively interest in sports and will elect some field in which we feel sure he will excel. We can't deny that our whole lives are centered in this youngster, and so far he has never given us a moment of anxiety."

Father Is Proud of Him.

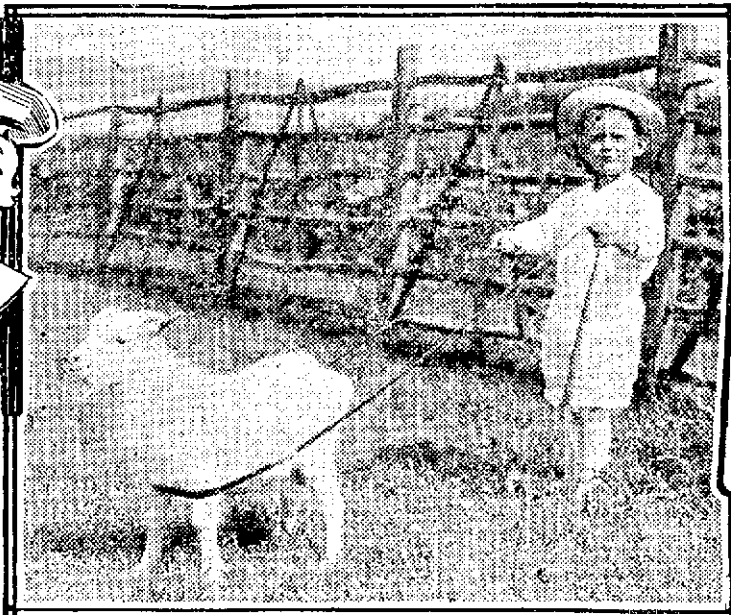

Mr. Mac Lean is just as practical in his views for the future of the Billionaire Baby as the mother.

"What am I going to make of him?" he asked. "Why a healthy, sturdy, normal boy, of course, and then a useful man. He is a husky little fellow and he likes everything that a normal American boy should like. He is fond of horses, and that is especially gratifying to me. For horses are my hobby. Any boy who takes to horses and sticks to them for his diversion is safe, for then there are fewer chances of his being weaned from the healthy outdoor life to that of the all-night cafes that have played such havoc with the young sons of wealthy parents. He has all the pets any boy could desire, and we intend to let him run just as wild at Black Point Farm as he cares to. In fact we took that place for him, and that he enjoys every second of his stay there could never be doubted by anyone who sees him at play with his little negro chum."

Black Bill likes the Black Point Farm, too. He admits that it has many advantages over the old Southern plantation where he first saw the light of day and then, too, playing valet to a Billionaire boy gives him advantages that he did not possess when, as a barefooted little picaninny, he was content to live in a little log cabin and call it home. Now Bill's quarters are just as comfortable, if not as luxurious, as those of his little master, but then Bill never cared much about luxuries anyway. Even now he feels much more at home in his bare feet than he does in dressing shoes, for Bill never cared much about shoes, "bliss shirts" or any such jars, for that matter. He is just as wholesome as the Mac Leans hope to keep Vincent, and that is why they adopted him.

DIOGENES

By GEORGE FITCH, Author of "At Good Old Siwash."

DIOGENES was the George Bernard Shaw of his time. He got his living by cussing humanity and making humanity like it. Diogenes was born about 400 B. C. in Greece and during his early life took up counterfeiting for a profession. He was caught and banished from his state. This curbed his disposition and he became the champion grover of the period. Like modern malefactors of great intelligence he decided that he was right and that the whole world was to be severely criticised for rebuking him. He accordingly moved to Athens, borrowed a tub and became a philosopher. He emitted his philosophy on the street corners like many of our modern advance thinkers and retarded workers, and he used the tub for advertising purposes. By means of living in it he became famous, and large numbers of leading citizens came to visit him and to ask him questions, which invariably got rude answers. When Alexander the Great visited him he asked what he might do to gratify him; whereupon Diogenes asked him to step out of the sun, his morning shave fit being about to come on. All this won Diogenes great fame, and he did his best to live up to the public expectations. He prowled about Athens by daylight with a lantern hunting for an honest man, and passed by the city officials without even hesitating. He produced a large number of sayings to prove that nobody was any better than he, and that it was dishonest to try to be honest, and in general acted like the proprietor of a blind pig saloon yawping against a reform wave. He successfully lived for almost ninety years without using his tub for anything except a shelter and did nothing but good to humanity, being funny, and happy, being famous. Many modern thinkers have studied the system of Diogenes and have imitated it successfully. He was his own press agent and the first one on record. If he had taken a bath and been polite to humanity he would have had to work for a living. On the other hand, a great many disciples tried to imitate Diogenes but received the cold indifferent shoulder of the populace and had to appeal to the poor master for relief. The moral is plain. It doesn't matter much what you do in order to live in history, but one rule must be rigidly carried out. Do it first.

Heart to Heart Talks

By CHARLES N. LURIE

THE BLESSING OF THE SNOW.

As the whiteness of the snow covers the decaying brown of the year, so does the whiteness of the hair lighten and glorify the closing years of human life.

Under the benign covering of the snow lies the promise of the spring. Under the whitening thatch of the human habitation, perhaps, the certainty of a spring in another existence.

The earth is resurrected. The spirit shall live.

As you count the whitening hairs, consider each one as a snowflake, sent to cover with the beauty of the snow the decaying remains of the years that have passed. Wear them not with regret, but with the calm acceptance of the years that have passed and promise of the ages to come.

To all who live comes in time the whitening of the hair. If you would live long you must face the fact that with the addition of years you enter old age. Regard it not as a burden or a source of regret.

Be not as those of whom the German proverb says: "All would live long, but no one wishes to be old."

The infirmities of age are many. It is true, but are they not compensated by the gift of the added years in which to live, to think, to feel? The ardor of youth and its vigor are replaced by the experience of age and its wisdom. All of these qualities have their places and their values. Each in its own way is best. Each has its own time for use.

"Age is opportunity no less than youth itself, though in another dress." It is pleasant to note that white hair among women is no longer considered a disfigurement. Indeed, the pendulum has swung to the other extreme, and fashionable women are vying with one another in assuming the virtues of white hair if they have it not naturally.

Even young women with crowns of glory radiant in the colors of youth, blond, brunette and auburn, are imitating the whiteness of the hair of their grandmothers. They powder the hair to make it white.

A passing fancy, of course, but it teaches in some degree the lesson that there are honor and glory in the whitening of the hair.
